State Probing 2 Deaths

Check Water In Suburb

An outbreak of gastro-intestinal diseases in Country Club Allotment No. 3 which have caused two deaths recently is under study today by the Ohio Department of Health.

State health authorities were called by local officials to assist in the search for the cause of the outbreak.

Dr. Charles P. Freeble jr., head of the communicable disease division of the state department examined the area today with a crew of laboratory experts.

Most of those stricken have been children, Dr. John D. Portetrfield, state health director said.

Local health authorities said an unusual incidence of cases of gastro enteritis has occurred in the area.

The deaths were a four-month-old baby boy on July 2 and a 11-month-old girl on July 10. Both were caused by "acute gastro-enteritis, according to the death certificate.

CHECK CASES

City health nurses today are making a door-to-door survey of the area to determine the exact number of cases of gastro intestinal disorders now in existence and the number that have been contracted recently.

Meanwhile, health department officials are taking water, food, milk, and other samples in an attempt to discover the exact cause of the outbreak.

State health men are making a survey of the water supplies in an attempt to determine the cause of the outbreak.

The Country Club Allotment No. 3 is an area extending west from Bowman street, along the north side of Westbrook Country club.

It contains approximately 88 homes with a population of 352, according to a recent health department survey.

The allotment is one of Mansfield's suburban areas that has no public water supply or sewage disposal system.

A recent survey conducted by Douglas P. Griffin, state health department sanitary engineer, whose office is in Mansfield, disclosed approximately 10,000 persons are living in an area around the city with inadequate water supply and sewage disposal systems.

Study Air Tragedy

LOS ANGELES —(INS)— Investigators today opened a probe into the fiery crash of a non-scheduled airliner which killed 35 persons and injured 14 others and a reported fist fight which may have caused the disaster.

The plane, a C-46 operated by Standard airlines, smacked into a fog-shrouded mountain top near Chatsworth yesterday.

Agents of the Civil Aeronautics board headed the investigation under supervision of James N. Peyton, chief of CAB's region six.

According to reports of survivors, the crash followed a bloody struggle between two men passengers a few minutes before the New York-to-Los Angeles plan was to have set down at the Burbank airport.

Meanwhile a group of American correspondents today began the grisly task of identifying the bodies of 14 of their colleagues who died yesterday along with 31 others in India's worst aviation disaster.

The correspondents arrived at Bombay, along with American Ambassador Loy W. Henderson, who visited the scene of the crash, 17 miles north of Bombay, near the Santa Crux airdrome.

Searchers probing the charred wreckage of the Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) Constellation, recovered eight more bodies today.

Delays Appearance

NEW YORK — (INS) — Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn Dodgers' second Baseman, said this morning that his appearance before the House un-American Activities committee in Washington, scheduled for today, has been put off "until a later date."

THIS IS MANSFIELD!—This plane's eye view encompasses the heart of Mansfield, a city of progress, as seen looking east past Central park.

President To Speak

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Truman is going to sit down tonight and tell the American people about his prescription for heading off a depression.

He wants to get over to them his idea there is nothing to be scared about in the moderate economic decline unless folks get panicky.

And he wants to defend the fiscal policy of his administration against criticism by some members of Congress.

The President will talk to the nation over four major radio networks and via television from a desk in the movie projection room at the White House.

This first major so - called "fireside chat" by Mr. Truman this year is scheduled for 9:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard time).

The talk, White House aides said, will be an elaboration of his midyear economic report to Congress on Monday. In this he scrapped earlier demands for a 4,000,000,000 tax increase and proposed an 11- point program to expand production, employment and purchasing power.

A Letter About Our Town

Things Have Changed, But Good

Dear Bill:

I was thinking last night of that day at Anzio when we got to talking about the home town. Remember, you bet it hadn't changed a bit?

Listen, fella, if you had stuck around here after the "big spat" you'd have seen some things change. Everybody's talking progress like crazy now. This town is really on the map and going places!

Remember that hay field they used to call an airport? We've got a million dollar job out there now with trunkline air service. You can fly to Paris and back for the week end. Remember Paris, boy?

Well, they got the airport pretty well along three years ago. That was just a starter for the town. We've expanded!

Mary and I took the kids (two now) for a drive out Ashland road the other night. We had a hard time finding a farm between here and Ashland. All built up. It's the same out Millsboro road and all over the city. By the way, the next time they ask you about the size of your home town, it's 50,630 now—taking in all the suburbs.

Guess I've really settled down. Bought a house last year. Got a fat mortgage, but it's mine. Remember that farm land south of town they called South Boulevards? That's where we live, and you should see it now. Best looking little houses in the city, we think. We're part of the city out here now. City council took us in last spring. Next move is to take in Lincoln Heights and Roseland.

Saw Jim the other day. He's got your old job out at Dominion Electric. He had a pretty rough time of it on Okinawa. Was in the hospital a couple of years but he's looking pretty good now. Jim said he heard the tire company has spent about $2,000,000 in new buildings and other expansion since the war. Did I send you those clippings about our biggest industry spending $7,000,000 on that new building and those electric ranges Tappan's is experimenting with? About 20 new industries have moved here in the past four years.

Of course, work's a little slow right now. I've still got my job and they keep telling us it's going to pick up in the fall. I can't complain too much.

Jim's brother was laid off so he went after a fireman's job. He's out at the new No. 5 station on Marion avenue which is the slickest thing you've ever seen. Can't tell it's a "hose house." Now they're talking about building another station out in the north end. Old No. 4 is being rebuilt, too. Guess they'll move in this month sometime.

Big things have hapuened since you left, Bill. We've got about $4,000,000 wrapped up in new school buildings for the kids; and we're going to have a mighty fine fishing spot near Lexington some of these days. The city built a dam down there, called the Clear Fork dam, for more water. There's even a possibility that we'll

Investigate Shooting

FLINT, Mich. — (AP) — With a bullet as their only clue, police and sheriff's officers worked doggedly today to find the swamp killer of pretty Beatrice Dickerson.

The 17 - year - old high school girl was shot to death Monday night on her way home from work as a theater cashier.

Dr. Robert Gernstad, who performed an autopsy, said death was caused by a bullet which entered her right eye and came out the back of her head. She had not been raped, the physician said.

Police experts said they believed the bullet was either a .22 or .32. It was found on the ground near the body. No weapon was found.

State and city police joined the search for the killer at the invitation of Sheriff Thomas W. Wolcott.

The girl's body was found by a neighbor of the Dickersons in a bog about three blocks from her home. She was nearly nude.

She had been dragged about 100 feet from the spot where she first had struggled with her assailant.

A Progressive City Looks Ahead

–An Editorial

ACTUALLY, you don't need any statistics—although there are plenty of them available—to realize how very greatly the city of Mansfield has progressed since the end of the war. All you have to do is look around.

Downtown, several handsome new mercantile and service buildings have been erected. Many stores have replaced old fronts with glistening, colorful glass or other attractive materials. Interiors have been remodeled.

In the residential areas many new businesses have sprung up. They range from the little neighborhood stores to the big, smoothly functioning supermarket.

Industry has spent millions of dollars enlarging and improving its plants.

All these are the visible, outward signs of progress. Behind them lies the fact that Mansfield's greater population is getting better and faster distribution of goods in pleasanter surroundings. What is called "personal service" has greatly improved. Just as an example, virtually every dry-cleaning establishment in the city has built a new structure, expanded to better quarters, or improved its familiar place of doing business.

The city is developing a $2,450,000 water supply project at the Clear Fork Reservoir which may also become a recreation area. Recreation facilities have also been improved at Charles Mill and Pleasant Hill lakes. A city-sponsored recreation program is being carried out in the parks in summer and indoors in winter.

Regular airline service has been established at Mansfield's Municipal airport and work is underway for a permanent $1,000,000 Air National Guard installation there. A naval training station has been added to the city's public buildings.

Outstanding is the school building program approved by the taxpayers and already well under way. New structures will serve the rapidly developing Roseland and Maple Lake (Brinkerhoff) areas. Antiquated buildings are being replaced at Newman, West Fifth, Prospect, and Carpenter, with the latter going to a new site on Marion avenue where the board of education offices also will be located.

Major improvements have been made or are planned at Woodland, Rebecca Grubaugh, Hedges, and Bowman schools. A Field house will be erected at Senior High which has also been provided with a splendid stadium in Arlin Field.

Work started this week on the building to house the Mansfield News-Journal's new $1,000,000 plant. In less than a year this development will add to Mansfield's business world one of the most modern newspaper plants of its size in the country.

The South Boulevards area of the city has grown tremendously and has been taken into the corporation limits. There is unusual business and residential growth, too, in the Ashland road area. New homes have grown up in all directions from the city. Many city residents have acquired farms.

Two new stations are being provided for fire protection —one an addition, the other a replacement. A new bus garage has been built, as well as several telephone exchanges. More electrical power has been made available for factories and residences.

The population of the city proper has grown from 42,000 in 1946 to 46,100 at present with the total reaching 50,600 when areas near the city limits are included in the count. Mansfield has grown twice as fast as the rest of Ohio!

Progress? That's Mansfield. . . .

And the city continues to look ahead to even greater expansion through the cooperative efforts of the civic, business, and industrial leaders whose firms are represented in the exceptionally fine advertising messages presented in this "Progress Edition."

Stork Gets Progressive Idea, Too

Talk about progress! Two Mansfield families are right in line with what the News-Journal is talking about today in its 56-page Progress Edition. Mansfielders do things in a big way. They do more than their share. Its things like this that help build a city.

The city's population was increased by 14 today, according to stork reports from General hospital, but that isn't all.

Two of the families have twins. Twin girls were born to Mr. and Mrs. C. Smith Dunn, 481 Cline avenue, and twin boys to Mr. and Mrs. Anton Breinich, Mansfield, R. D. 6. Total birth score: 10 boys and four girls.

Mayor Raps Lausche In Gaming War

Hurls Charge of 'Phony Issue'

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus today said Gov. Frank J. Lausche is throwing up a "misleading, but intentional smoke-screen" around gambling in Ohio.

In a prepared statement, Rhodes said Lausche was developing a "phony issue to cover his failures with the 98th General assembly"

Recent published statements attributed to the governor, Rhodes declared, were "fraught with insincerity and hypocrisy."

The Columbus mayor said Lausche, as governor, has adequate laws to stamp out gambling if he knows that it exists.

In recent statements the governor has "not only admitted that he knows gambling exists," Rhodes said, "but has pointedly told exactly where gambling sites are located in the state."

Rhodes said several sections of the Ohio code made it possible for the attorney general to act as the governor's "personal prosecutor" for any crimes against the state.

"The governor has countless resources at his command to stamp out gambling anywhere in Ohio, if he seriously wants to do so."

Laws giving the governor power to act against gambling have been on the statute books of Ohio for many years, Rhodes said.

Nature Solves Grain Problem

KANSAS CITY — (AP) — Mother nature has taken care of the southwest's wheat storage problem — by sharply cutting the yield.

The bumper crop they were talking about just a few weeks ago turned out to be the crop that wasn't there. And neither was the storage problem.

Wheat farmers and grainmen had braced themselves for the bumper crop. They had drummed up all the storage space they could find. Airplane hangers and warehouses had been leased.

Then wet weather and disease left their mark.

Action Halts Walkout

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — President Philip Murray of the CIO-United Steelworkers, today announced that his union's executive board "by unanimous action" has accepted President Truman's proposal for a 60-day delay in a steel strike.

The executive board's decision will be given to the union's wage policy committee for ratification at a meeting later today.

Murray said:

"When the wage-policy committee acts today we will officially notify the President of our decision."

A strike of 500,000 union steelmakers was set for this week end —on Friday and Saturday midnight.

HAS NO COMMENT

Murray told a news conference he had no comment on the U. S. Steel corporation's refusal to go along with the President's plan. President Truman had asked Murray and six leading steel producers to continue existing contracts for 60 days pending a report from a fact-finding board the President has appointed.

The union leader said he probably would have a statement concerning U. S. Steel following this afternoon's union meeting.

Only one of six steel companies —Jones & Laughlin—thus far has accepted the White House proposal.

The President made the same request of U. S. Steel corporation, Republic Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube company and Wheeling Steel.

Jones & Laughlin, one of the nation's leading independent producers, immediately wired the President it was agreeable to the 60-day reprieve.

Then U. S. Steel hurled its bombshell. The corporation declared it would have nothing to do with the fact-finding board. It based its objections on the fact that the President had by-passed the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Republic and Bethlehem then chimed in with rejections. They echoed U. S. Steel's reasons.

Hundreds Defy Edict

LONDON — (UP) — Hundreds more workers flouted the government's state of emergency degree today and joined the wildcat London dock strike. It threatened soon to spread to tugs, barges and even meat distribution centers.

The government still has not announced how it will use the dictatorial powers granted it under the state of emergency proclaimed by King George VI two days ago to break the paralyzing strike.

Prime Minister Attlee was readying a statement on the crisis to deliver in commons this afternoon.

Some 460 more dock workers left their jobs today, swelling the number of strikers to 13,756. They left stranded 132 ships loaded with more than 500,000 tons of food and raw materials vitally needed for Britain's recovery program.

Almost half the post of London's labor force of 30,000 men now was out.

'Gang Up' On Farm Program

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The administration's new farm program was endangered today while a GOP-Southern Democratic coalition swung into action in the House in an effort to block new legislation.

Strong southern support was thrown behind a Republican proposal to continue the existing law by postponing for one year the Aiken-Hope law, now scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1.

Success of this move would block action on the administration program advanced by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan.

Irish Leader Dies

DUBLIN —(INS)— Funeral arrangements were made today for Dr. Douglas Hyde, 89, former president of Ireland, who died last night at his Dublin home.

Four Dry Cleaners Build New Plants

City Sees Expansion Of Others

Equipment Does Better Work

Four new dry cleaning establishments have been erected in Mansfield in the past three years and most of the other cleaners have remodeled or enlarged their plants

The four new plants are owned by Swan Cleaners, Morgan Cleaners and Furriers, Gerber's dry cleaning and Bogner's Dry cleaning.

Swan Cleaners moved into a new location at 165 Park avenue west on Decoration day of 1947

The firm started in Mansfield on July 1, 1928, Gordon Schwan, proprietor, said

Basic principles of dry cleaning have changed little in the past 15 years, he said

The equipment has been improved so better work can be done with less effort on the part of the operator, but there has been no major change in the cleaning process

SHINE ELIMINATED

One improvement noted by Schwan is the elimination of "shine' on hard-finished cloth

The shine was caused when the presser head came down on the cloth he said

Now hard finished clothing is placed on a form and sprayed with steam and air which sets the press without the cloth being touched This eliminates the objectionable "shine" he said

Morgan Cleaners and Furriers, 800 Ashland road, moved into a new $100,000 plant in February, 1947

One of the features of the plant is a recreation room for the firm's 30 employes.

The recreation room is equipped so that it can be converted into a company cafeteria, R B Morgan said

Most recently completed of Mansfield's four new dry cleaning plants is Gerber s Dry cleaning, 160 South Main street

Gerbers moved into the building Nov 1, 1948, after being in business here for six years

The new plant was fitted with all new equipment which enlarged the capacity four times, Nick Gerber said

FAMILY AFFAIR

Gerbers is largely a family affair. The owner, Nick Gerber, two daughters, and one son work at the plant

Another new dry cleaning establishment is Bogner's Dry cleaning, 75 South Main street

"The new plant which we occupied on March 1, 1948 tripled the facilities of the old location," Steve Bogner said

Latest and most modern equipment was installed at the new plant he said

Bogner s Dry cleaning had been in business here for 10 years prior to moving into the new plant

Two Bow Out Of Ohio Race

COLUMBUS — (AP) — A cabinet officer and a major general bowed out of Ohio politics Monday — temporarily, at least — by saying they wouldn't consider running for public office

The cabinet officer is Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati, a former lieutenant governor of Ohio The major general is Robert S Beightler wartime commander of Ohio s famed 37th Division, now commander of the Fifth armored Division at Camp Chaffee Ark

Sawyer said he would not consider being the Democratic candidate for senator next year against Sen Robert A Taft (R-Ohio)

General Beightler, who frequently has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination for governor informed friends yesterday he would not be available for the race

Japanese Land Reform Near Completion

Action Serves as Bulwark Against Reds

TOKYO —(AP)— The land reform program, which economists say may be General MacArthur's major move to democratize Japan, is nearing completion

Begun early in the occupation and designed originally to break up the feudal land tenure system, the program is viewed by many now as a large factor in holding rural areas against communist inroads.

It was in December 1945 that occupation headquarters told the Japanese government to "take measures to insure that those who till the soil of Japan shall have a more equal opportunity to enjoy the fruits of their labor"

At that time tenant farmers cultivated 46 per cent of Japan's farms Today they cultivate only 12 per cent

Then about 70 per cent of the farmers rented all or part of the land they worked Only nine per cent of them cultivated as much as five acres, and 67 per cent worked less than two and one-half acres

Most of these tenants now have become landowners By June 30, this year, all of 4,581,073 acres of cultivated land acquired by the government will have been sold to the families working and living on it Pasture land also is being purchased by the government and sold to tenants

Terms allow tenants to pay for all or any part at the time of purchase, with the balance spread over 24 years at 3 2 per cent interest However, annual payments cannot exceed one-third of the gross income from the land in that year The government will defer, reduce or cancel the rest

Previous owners of the land are paid in 24-year-bonds at 3 65 per cent interest Prices of various parcels are set by land commissions elected by the farmers of each region

CAT PROBLEM SOLVED

NEWPORT, N H — (UP) — There's more than one way to skin a cat or to get one out of a treetop The perennial problem of firemen has been solved by the local department When a cat gets high in a tree and refuses to come down, Newport firemen pump a soft spray of water just above the cat, which quickly descends

Bares Jap Brutalities

YOKOHAMA — (UP) — A former superfortress co-pilot Tuesday told the Allied War Crimes commission how he and another airman were tortured by the Japanese secret police in Tokyo prison during the final months of the war.

First Lieut. Walter P. Tribble, of Donald, S. C., now an air force weather officer at Iwo Jima, testified at the reconvened trial of Keijiro Otani, wartime chief of the Japanese secret police.

Tribble said he and other Americans were beaten on three separate occasions and were refused medical aid On one occasion Tribble said, he saw the lacerated back of bombardier First Lieut William P Rosenthal, Chicago, after he had been flayed

Tribble also told the commission that 2nd Lieut Theordore H Fox, Cleveland, died because he was refused medical treatment for injuries received when he bailed out of a fighter plan over Japan

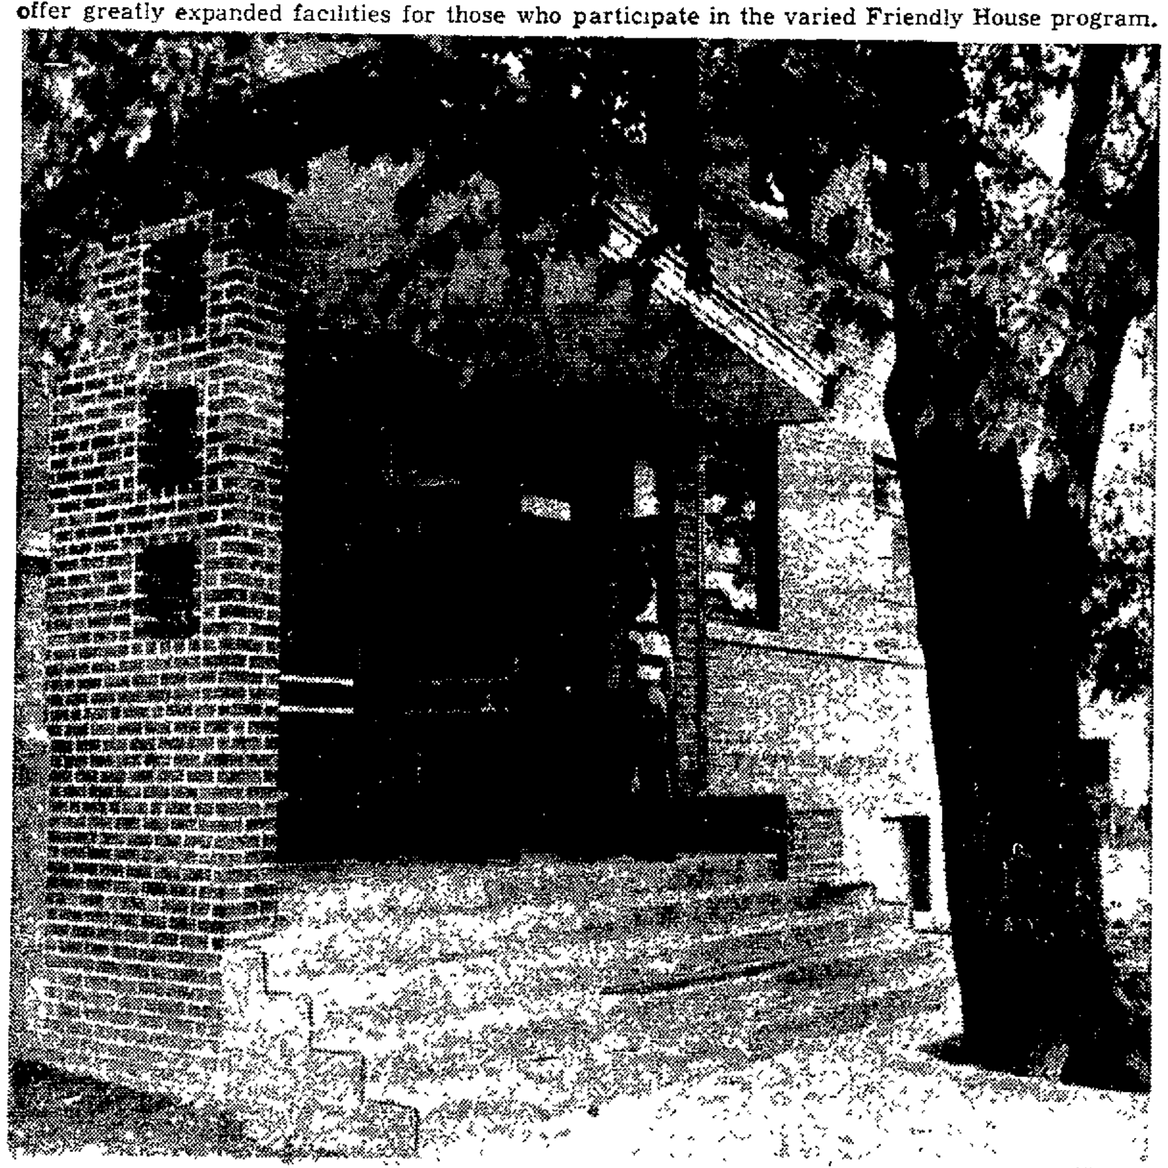
LARGER QUARTERS—The large new Friendly House building on North Mulberry street will offer greatly expanded facilities for those who participate in the varied Friendly House program.



OPEN DOORS—The open doors at the main entrance to the new Friendly House building on North Mulberry street are a symbol of the organization's policy of welcoming all Mansfield groups to share in the use of its facilities.

New Buildings Erected, Camp Expanded

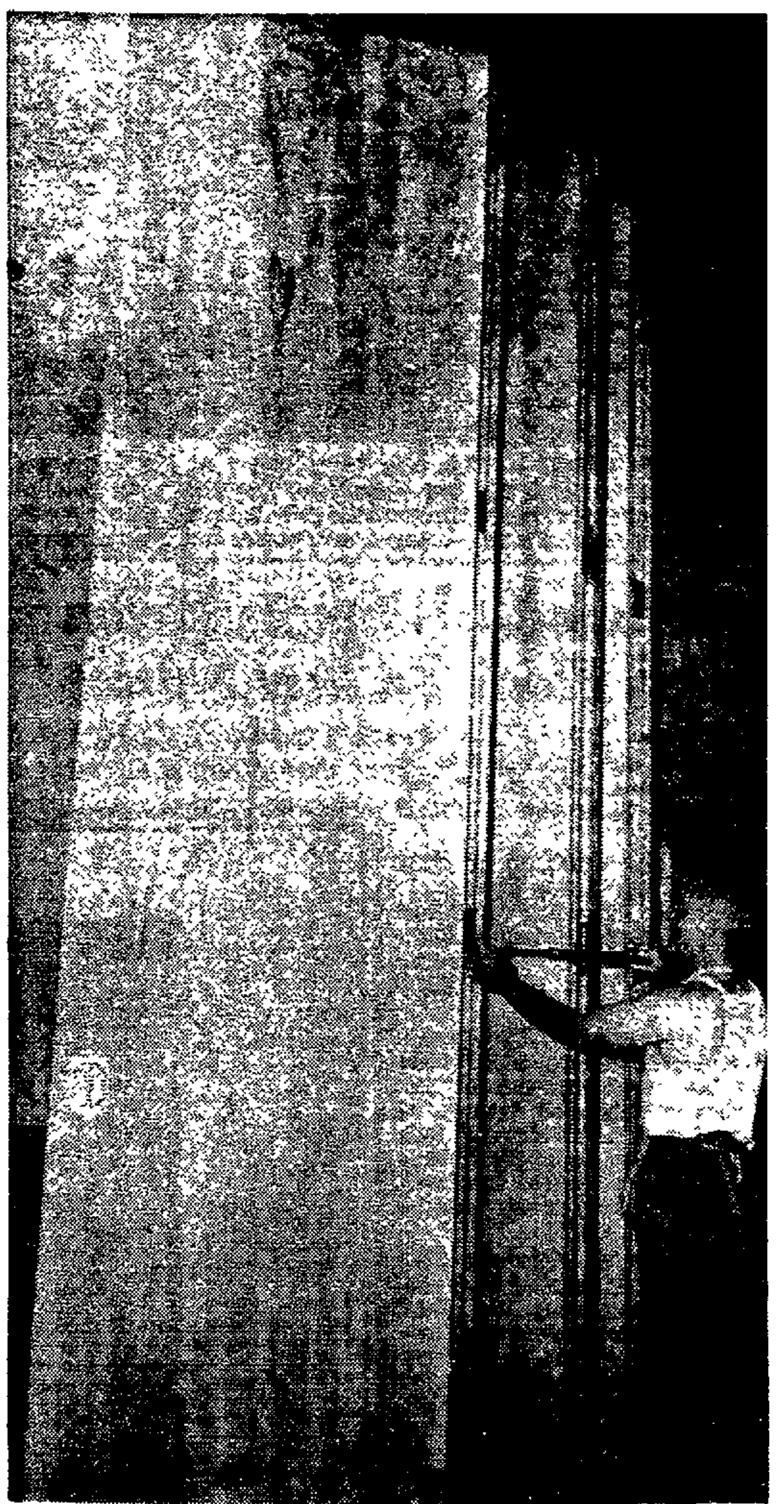
Friendly House Progresses 2 Ways

Progress at Mansfield Friendly House since the war, has been in two definite directions — the erection of a new building and the expansion of Hidden Hollow camp.

For years the home on North Main street has been inadequate — so much so that activities have had to be curtailed rather than expanded. The attendance of 900 persons for the fall and winter terms has had to remain unchanged for a number of years because of the lack of facilities and the condition of the building.

In 1946 a campaign was launched for $250,000 under the direction of Paul Endriss as campaign chairman. Of that amount Friendly House was to raise $60,000 and the remainder was to be given by Mansfield Manufacturers through the Richland Foundation. When the campaign was finally ended it was found that Friendly House had exceeded its share by about 10 per cent.

Plans for the new building lagged because of the high cost of labor and materials. Finally, however, the cornerstone was laid last August with Mayor Roy W. Vaughn, city and Friendly House officials participating.



FINISHING TOUCHES—Ralph Etzwiler puts hinges on several doors for the new Friendly House building on North Mulberry street which is nearly completed.

Work has progressed steadily in spite of labor shortages. At one time the scarcity of brick layers created a situation that was solved only when members of the union agreed to work on Saturdays. However, it is expected that early this month the new building will be ready to turn over to Friendly House officials for the planning of dedication ceremonies.

The new settlement house, built on land given by Carl Sternbaum in memory of his son, Lt. Jacob Sternbaum, killed in World War II, and worth about $4,000, will accommodate a membership between 1,000 and 1,500 persons. It is situated on three lots facing North Mulberry street between Aten Way and Vale avenue. The building is a two - story structure of fireproof tan brick, with darker trim.

The building has two stories and a half besides the basement. On the first floor are the lobby with a big fireplace, libraries, the huge gymnasium, scaled to seat at least 1,500 and with ceiling - high doors thay may be shut for smaller groups, showers and toilets, meeting room, and club rooms.

The five - room apartment on the second floor is modern and lighted by many windows. It is for Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gimbel, directors of the Friendly House, who have lived in the inadequate, poorly arranged apartment at the old settlement house since taking over about 18 years ago.

Also on the second floor will be rooms for staff members a big dormitory for girls, a girls' lounge and social hall and plenty of storage space. Up a few steps from the second floor will be the brightly painted nursery in blue, where working mothers may leave their children

SUPPLANTS KINDERGARTEN

This day nursery will supplant the kindergarten which has been a part of Friendly House since its organization 34 years ago.

Hidden Hollow camp, the summer camping ground for boys and girls southeast of Mansfield, can accommodate more than 400 youngsters. During the war attendance was little more than 200 children.

During the intervening years it has grown in attendance and size. What began as a lodge and a couple of cabins has today increased to an expanded lodge, eight cabins, four for the boys and four for the girls, a chapel, a swimming pool, handicraft cabin, and barn to house the three ponies

Each year more buildings are erected or improved and enlarged. This year an extra room will be placed on the lodge to house more staff members.

When the camp opened June 26, the boys and girls who attended had one of the best equipped and best organized camps in this part of Ohio.

STEADY GROWTH — This aerial photograph of the Roseland area shows the development in an area which consisted mainly of open fields only a few years ago. Homes and other buildings shown in the picture represent only a portion of the growth that has taken place in this section. There is a modern new Roseland school (not shown in picture) to serve the locality. The original development in Roseland began in the 1920's. During depression years, growth lagged. Rapid development revived in the post-war period and is still continuing.

Roseland Area Has Shown Rapid Post-War Growth

One of the faster growing subdivisions of Masfield is Roseland, located along the Springmill road, just beyond the Westbrook Country club.

Plans for the Roseland district were laid 25 years ago when W. O. Burkholder, 94 South Main street, and the late Russell Maxwell built the first 50 houses shortly after purchasing what is now known as the Country Club addition of the Roseland subdivision.

While most people generally accept the name "Roseland" as including all the land lying north of West Fourth street road and west of the Country club, those who have been instrumental in developing the district explain that there are really several additions there, as well as the Country Club allotment.

Recently W. B. Ford built 15 government - approved housing units in the Country Club allotment. Burkholder, who is still engaged in erecting houses in the section, estimated that nearly 500 new homes have been built in the entire neighborhood since the close of the war.

Among the new business buildings was an addition to the Roseland garage, owned and operated by Dan C. Inscore, who is operating a hardware store in connection with his garage.

Another new place of business in the Roseland area, is Frank's Neighborhood Store, which is owned by Frank Balbaugh. This store building was erected last year, and opened for business last July.

The most recent addition to the neighborhood is the new Roseland school built at a cost of $364,150.

Another new building is a tavern operated by William Runyon.

Atomic Attack Safeguards Being Studied

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The American people may be told within the next few months what to do in case of an atomic attack.

The atomic energy commission now is working on such a project — a voluminous secret report for military use. A spokesman said today it is hoped that a handbook of non - secret information can be made available to the public in the fall.

Dr. Shields Warren, AEC director of biology and medicine, yesterday gave the joint senate-house atomic committee a preview of what has been determined thus far about the effects of atomic bombs on human beings.

He was one of the last witnesses to appear as the committee ended, at least for the time being, its public inquiry into charges of "incredible mismanagement" made against the AEC by Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa).

Consigns Swine To Conference

Frank Rudrick, Butler, has consigned two registered Hampshires to the National Hampshire Type conference to be held in Omaha, Neb. August 1 and 2.

This is the 11th annual type conference sponsored by Hampshire Swine Registry, the organization for officially recording all Hampshire hogs. Breeders from throughout the nation gather with key men from all phases of the swine industry and plot a course that will keep the Hampshire a middle-of-the-road meat type hog.

Rail Hearing Set July 21

COLUMBUS — (AP) — A hearing on whether the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad will receive permission to abandon trains No. 30 and 37 between Logan and Pomeroy will be resumed July 21.

Attorney - examiner Eugene Nolan recessed the hearing yesterday after the railroad presented its witnesses and opponents of the abandonment had run through a lengthy list of witnesses, including the Vinton county state representative.

Among witnesses who opposed the railroad's proposal were state Representative H. E. Abele of McArthur; former state representative O. F. Sharp of McArthur; W. A. Smith of Pomeroy, head of a businessman's organization; Lewis E. Price of Logan, and Postmaster Elmer Caldwell of Gallipolis

THE NEWS-JOURNAL GOES TO MARKET

When you stop to think about it a newspaper performs a great many tasks in a community. It prints all of the things that happen day by day . . . in the city . . . in the country at large . . . and all over the world . . . so that folks can know what is going on.

It seeks out the serious evils that may exist and brings them to the attention of the public so that the situation may be corrected. And it undertakes to prevent undue advantage being taken of the people, by publicizing and explaining the situation. A good newspaper works for the public welfare and in the public interest.

Finally, a newspaper serves as a connecting link between the buyer and seller. Merchants present their wares in the advertising columns of the newspaper. They are able to reach their customers in an inexpensive and complete manner. Buyers read the ads and learn where merchandise may be bought and where the purchases may be made most advantageously.

In connection with this last thought it may be said that the prosperity, and the progress which a city makes depends in some measure upon its newspapers. People in the surrounding areas read the newspaper and patronize the merchants in the city in which that paper is located. The more territory a newspaper can cover the more prosperous the stores in that territory can become.

Always a good newspaper, your News-Journal is going to become even a better one. As this issue goes to press the plans have been completed and work is being started on one of the most modern newspaper plants in the country . . . as modern and as well equipped as a large metropolitan daily.

To the reader this new plant will mean earlier editions, better printing and more vivid pictures.

To the merchant it will mean more attractive advertisements and more customers . . . because as soon as we have the means to do so we intend to vastly increase our circulation . . . and every new reader is a new customer for the stores in this area.

Yes . . . The Mansfield News-Journal is going to market . . . to a new and larger market . . . a market that will mean a greater and more prosperous Mansfield.

Business Section Appearance Changed Since End of War

$2 Million Spent On Face Lifting

Downtown Building, Remodeling Noted

The business district in Mansfield has taken on a new appearance in the four years since the war's end New buildings have sprung up and old ones have had their faces lifted

More than two million dollars has been spent since 1945 in building new stores and remodeling and adding to old ones. The city's post - was progress probably is more evident in the business district than anywhere else in the city.

The change has been gradual, and most Mansfielders would have difficulty visualizing the streets of four years ago But if a pre - war resident of the city were to return today, he would find the changes striking.

NEWER BUILDINGS

Among the new buildings which have been constructed since the war are those housing Sears Roebuck and company and the Woolworth store on North Park street, A B Grafton and the Kroger store on Park avenue west, Sternbaum's and South Boulevards markets on Lexington avenue, Hall's Shamrock market on Park avenue west, and Fort's garage on Park avenue east

In addition to the new buildings, new businesses have come into the city and there has been extensive moving and remodeling of older stores

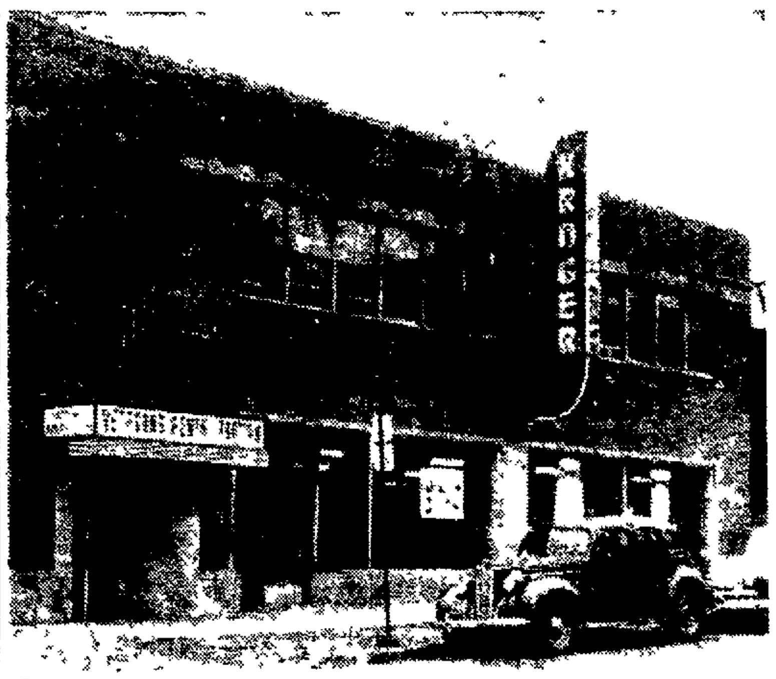
The O'Neil company remodeled and moved into their present location as one of the larger new retail businesses to come into Mansfield since the war Bing's furniture, Madison's and Todd's jewelry also opened stores in Mansfield in the pre - war years.

Singer Sewing machine moved in on North Main street, Neisner's moved into Richman Brothers old location, and Montgomery Ward remodeled a building for a new farm implement store on West Fourth street

Nearly every store on Main street and the business streets running into Main has done some remodeling either exterior or interior since the war

Many have added new fronts and display windows altering their appearance materially

The post - war expansion is far from being completed Construction work is under way for other new stores



POST-WAR BUILDING—The building housing the Kroger super market on Park avenue west is one of the new retail stores which have been erected in the city since the end of World War II

MODERN STRUCTURE—The new A B Grafton store and auto agency on Park avenue west is one of the modern' business buildings on the site of the old Congregational church

Markets New Fire Extinguisher

A small new fire extinguisher the Presto "CB", has been released and is being distributed in the Mansfield area by Karl F Freiberger and company, 72½ North Main street The fluid in the extinguisher contains chloro bromomethane, an extinguishing agent developed during the war

The new product contains an extinguishing power that will last about six minutes in its six-inch container To operate the case is inverted and the knob given a quarter turn' It can be shut off after use Refills cost less than half the initial cost

RETAIL EXPANSION—Proof of the growth and expansion of retail business in Mansfield in the post-war period are the number of new retail stores which have sprung up in and around the city in the last four years. An example of the building activity is the new Sternbaum's food mart on Lexington avenue

Ice Prevents Some Storms

VANCOUVER, B C — (UP) — 'Seeding" clouds with dry ice may not only produce rain, but also prevent lightning storms, L O Grant, mteorologist, finds.

Seeding with dry ice also can make it rain harder, even if it actually can't start a rainstorm, he added

Grant, one of several scientists who carried out seeding experiments in Arizona some time ago, said it probably would take researchers several years yet to tell whether it pays to seed clouds

Only certain types of clouds are worth seeding he said Quick seeding of a cumulus cloud sometimes fails to produce immediate precipitation but changes the nature of the cloud and causes it to attract moisture from neighboring clouds

That in turn changes an electrical charge at the bottom of the cloud and prevents building up a high enough potential for discharge, he said Or in other words, prevents a thunderstorm

Savings associations have aided 2,500,000 American families to obtain homes since the end of World War II, according to the United States Saving and Loan League

Dulles Backs Alliance In Maiden Speech As Senator

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Sen. John Foster Dulles, R., N. Y., in his maiden Senate speech, Tuesday urged ratification of the North Atlantic Defense treaty as a step in averting another war which, at times, has been "perilously near."

The Republican foreign policy expert and former United Nations spokesman told the Senate that the 12 - nation pact represents a major part of the west's strategy in defeating a Russian bid for "world domination."

The pact, he said, is an essential step in blocking Russia's "double - barreled offensive of threat and promise."

Dulles' speech was an answer to a blistering attack made on the treaty by veteran Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy committee.

Apologizing for addressing the Senate while still wrapped in "senatorial swaddling clothes," Dulles answered Taft's warning that the pact may lead to war, not peace, by saying.

"We can feel that a way has been found peacefully to resist, and I hope eventually to throw back Soviet communism in Europe But if we have found the way, we have not yet gone down that way to where it is safe to stop the North Atlantic treaty and the European Recovery program could not be abandoned without consequences of the gravest character."

Miss Quota On Blood Donors

The Red Cross blood unit collected 48 pints of blood yesterday to add to the 69 pints obtained Monday. The total of 117 pints is four more pints than were obtained on the last two-day visit, but falls short of the record of 133 pints and is not even close to the 200 pint quota for Mansfield.

"We are disappointed in our failure to reach our quota," bloor chairman Mrs. Stuart M. Weaver said today. "We hope that our new recruiting committee will be able to enlist more donors for our next visit," Mrs. Weaver added.

Richard Wolford is chairman of the recruitment committee and he will be aided by committee members David Ott and Robert LeFevre.

have soft water coming out of the faucet in a few years!

Those school buildings are really fine. They finished a new one in Roseland last year. That's got one of the nicest gyms I've seen. They built on to old Western avenue school—it's called Rebecca Grubaugh school now—they've moved Newman school around the corner into a new building and they're working on West Fifth. The school board's going to remodel Bowman and Prospect and put up a new Carpenter school on Marion avenue and a new Brinkerhoff building at Euclid and Highland.

Sometimes I wish you and I were back in high school. Remember those crowds that used to pack the bleachers at the old stadium? That's all over now. They built a new stadium out on West Fourth street road—call it Arlin Field—and it seats close to 12,000.

Enough Mansfielders shelled out to build a new Friendly House on Vale avenue and Mary and Russ Gimble have their hands full with all the kids who want to go to the Hidden Hollow camp now. My four-year-old's even talking about it.

Well, guess I'd better sign off now, Bill. Got to get out to the airport for practice with the airforce. Yep, this old foot soldier finally made it! The Air National Guard came in here and offered me a job on the ground crew. We're the 164th fighter squadron now with a million dollar installation promised for us out there.

Give my love to Jane. And try to make Mansfield on your vacation this summer. I think you'll be proud of your old hometown.

African Gorilla Capers In New Movie

By FRANK NEILL

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Old P. T. Barnum must be beaming benignly today in some faraway Valhalla because the cult be founded is not dead.

And if the kind citizens residing in six New England states and upper New York are not now cognizant of a movie called "Mighty Joe Young," then they must be reposing in some happy hunting ground themselves.

The largest screen premiere since T Edison concocted his magic latern is being staged in 268 New England towns this week and the vanguard of ballyhoo would turn even Brother Barnum wan with jealousy.

"Mighty Joe Young" has to do with an African gorilla of the same name who is bodyguard for a cute gal He hies to the U S and becomes a night club entertainer among other things, including a prize fighter who whips Primo Carnera Only reason "Mighty Joe Young" didn t make the Notre Dame football team was that his tourist visa expired

At any rate "Mighty Joe Young" is the dangblastedest flicker to emanate from movietown in 50 fortnights and the fanfare ushering it into northeastern theaters is fit and proper for an epic of its caliber.

The film was manufactured by John Ford and Merian Cooper and directed by Ernest B Shoedoack, the self same trio that turned out 'King Kong' some 15 years ago

A later - day Barnum named Terry Turner is the No 1 brain behind the avalanche of advance ballyhoo. Terrance is no neophyte in matters of this sort, having been banging around promotional dodge for eons.

It was he who introduced the original Siamese twins, for example

Steel Strike Must Be Prevented

WHETHER a strike by steel workers is really being contemplated or the threat is merely a part of jockeying in connection with contract negotiations cannot be known at the moment, but in any event nothing should be left undone to avoid—or, if necessary, prevent—such a calamity at a time when this nation's economy hangs on such a slender thread, with so much depending on uninterrupted industrial production.

The strike threat hinges on the argument by labor leaders that a fourth round of wage increases is in order, while the contention of management that further wage increases will heighten inflation and work to the detriment of national recovery.

If no way has yet been evolved, under the law, to prevent a concerted work stoppage which would wreak such havoc over the entire nation, then no time should be lost in correcting this omission rather than that Congress should use valuable time in seeking to cater to minorities rather than having greater regard for the general welfare.

It is now believed that President Truman will act, as a last resort, in at least postponing the threatened strike —and he should surely do this if there is no other way.

World Food Problems Studied

THE WORLD FOOD COUNCIL has set itself at the problem of production and consumption of food in various parts of the world. It has long been realized that the market problem of surplus commodities in some places, in the United States for instance, is related to the economic and social problem of increasing food consumption in some other areas, the Far East, the Near East, parts of Africa and South America. Now at last an organization has been set up to try to do something about it.

The Council says that less than a tenth of all the food produced in the world now finds its way into international trade. Not much more was traded in the so-called normal years before the war. The trick is to find ways to raise food production in the "hungry" areas and increase trade with those areas to a point where trade and agriculture combined will provide enough to eat. When that is done the United States probably will cease to have crop surplus problems.

See Defect In Shock Treatment

SOME psychiatrists are beginning to lose their enthusiasm for electric shock treatment, which has been popular in treating certain kinds of mental illness because the patient seems to be restored to a normal frame of mind in a miraculously short time.

Dr. Jessie Taft of the University of Pennsylvania, a leader in the field, expressed doubts about the treatment in a recent address. This is a technical matter which the psychiatrists in time will work out, but their reason for raising the question is interesting.

Many psychiatrists are coming to the view that the shock treatment only puts the mental patient back where he was before his mind broke down, without changing the conditions which led to the breakdown. In time, the breakdown simply happens all over again.

Almost everyone from day to day deals, in a limited way, with problems like those of psychiatry. Problems of personal and family relations, business and community relations, arise and sooner or later require some kind of action.

Beavers and Drought

THE BEE'S strongest rival as a symbol for unremitting industry has been the beaver, whose traditional labor has been turned to good account by the Palisades Interstate Park commission in New York and New Jersey.

In 1920, the Commission brought three pairs of beavers to the Bear Mountain area and placed them where their dam-building proclivities and those of their descendants could have full sway. Natural hollows left by the glacier period, together with nearby streams, made an environment which aroused the dam-building instincts of these flat-tailed toilers.

The park commissioners made use of the beaver dams by building 26 lakes which have made the area more attractive to visitors and have counteracted the periods of drought. The leafy coolness of the park contrasts strongly with the drought-burned areas nearby, and prove the usefulness of the beaver in conservation, according to Henry James, director of the Commission.

This experiment is one of many which show that one of the best ways of conserving nature's abundance is by using nature's ways. The country will profit better by cooperating with natural forces toward preservation than by the continued despoliation which has marked much of our past history.

Hall of Fame Candidate

DR. WILLIAM C. GORGAS should be in the Hall of Fame, says a group of his admirers, headed by Dr. Oliver C. Carmichael, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. They think that Gorgas has been strangely overlooked. As surgeon general of the Army Gorgas was instrumental in clearing the Canal Zone of fever, and making possible the digging of the Panama Canal.

The Hall finally admitted Dr. Walter Reed, who isolated the germ of yellow fever, and might well choose Gorgas also. But the electors, having many possible candidates to consider, are sometimes slow in making what seem to others to be obvious choices. It was years before they admitted such a star of American literature as Edgar Allan Poe.

The next election will take place in 1950. By that time the Gorgas committee might be able to work up a really good campaign.

Claims Senate Seeks To Pass Buck

By THOMAS L. STOKES

WASHINGTON — Economy has become a dominant issue in Congress.

It is intensified by the recent revelation of some rather grim facts, to wit, the $1,800,000,000 deficit in the fiscal year that closed June 30 and the prospect of a larger deficit this coming year, estimated up to $5.000,000,000. All this is reinforced by the natural aversion of Congress to increase taxes to close the gap. Members, likewise, are under the added compulsion of heavy mail from their constituents urging economy.

It is a job for Congress. But all of a sudden there develops a lot of timidity among members who have been talking big and loud about cutting down the costs of government.

For now it is proposed to "Leave it to Harry;" that is, pass the buck to President Truman. That is the purpose of a resolution introduced by Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), sponsored by a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats in the Senate, which would direct the President to cut all appropriation bills passed by Congress by five to 10 per cent. Support of 64 Senators is claimed for this project.

Republicans now are taking about just attaching this resolution as a rider to one of the appropriation bills still remaining to be acted upon, instead of passing a separate resolution.

The purpose is to force President Truman to accept this direction from Congress. He could veto a resolution, but it would be hard for him to veto a major appropriation bill, especially such a measure as the national military establishment bill, upon which Senator Taft (R., Ohio) proposes it be attached, or the ECA bill, which Senator Wherry (Nebr.), Republican Senate leader, suggests as a vehicle.

Only a few appropriation bills have become law thus far. A few others are still in conference between House and Senate. The House has completed its work. But six supply bills, including ECA and the national defense establishment, still have not been acted upon by the Senate, and those two major measures total nearly half of the 41-billion-dollar budget.

* * *

Easy Way Out.

WITH ITS work on appropriation bills still far from completed, the Senate originates this easy way out. By shifting responsibility to the President it would relieve members of Congress of blame for eliminating funds for this and that purpose, which hardly seems courageous or statesmanlike.

This procedure would represent partially, at least, abdication by Congress of its cherished power to control the purse which always has been insisted upon so fervently, especially by the House where all revenue bills must originate under the constitution.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn regards the project with a cold eye, though Representative Martin (Mass.), House Republican leader, has introduced a similar resolution in the House and a petition, which already has many signers, is in circulation supporting it.

As irregular as is this pass-the-buck economy device, the proposal to use the military or economic aid bill as a vehicle nevertheless serves to point up something of which the public should be reminded constantly when it considers the over-all problem in government.

This is that over three-fourths of the cost of government, 76 per cent as itemized in next year's budget, is to pay for past wars and for protection against possible future wars.

For $32.000,000,000 of the $41.900,000,000 budget is presented to Congress by the President was allocated to the military, foreign aid, benefits for veterans and interest on our staggering debt mostly representing the cost of war. Less than 10 billion dollars goes for all the other service of government to our people.

It is worthwhile to quote again what President Truman said in his 1948 budget message about these startling facts:

"This should be a sobering throught to all of us as we strive for the creation of lasting peace among the nations of the world."

There is the real problem—of economy in our national affairs, and of our civilization.

Looking Back

Twenty Years Ago Today

Saturday, July 13, 1929.

It was announced that construction of subway under Erie railroad on Park avenue west would be started immediately.

Mansfield stores reported wonderful "buying day" despite intense heat.

Seventy-three births were reported in Mansfield registration area in June — 45 girls and 28 boys.

Paul Tappan, D O Meese, Fred I. Wolfe, Arthur Saxe, Joseph Johnson and Dale Ward left for yacht cruise in Lake Superior.

Mrs Agnes M. Miller observed 84th birthday anniversary at her home, 61 South Linden road.

Party was given in honor of birthday anniversary of Mrs. William Bittinger, 159 Blanche street.

Many Mansfielders availed themselves of opportunity to make flight in Curtiss cabin planes which were at local airport.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On July 13, 1912, the United States Senate, by a vote of 55 to 28, ruled the election of William Lorimer of Illinois invalid because of corrupt practices.

Washington Calling

Secrecy Within the AEC

By MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — The whispering and the hinting about the conduct of the Atomic Energy Commission under the chairmanship of David Lilienthal goes on, inspired by those who would discredit Lilienthal. It goes on even though the chief charges thus far publicly aired seem to have been based on trivial or non-existent grounds.

The theme of the current inspired whispering is as fantastic as anything yet put out by those who would like to see Lilienthal removed. This includes the great mystery of the missing U-235, blown up momentarily into black headlines, which proved on investigation to be a very minor business indeed.

The story is that a "courier" was en route to Britain with important atomic data supplied to the British by the Atomic energy commission. Word of this got to certain Senate - House atomic committee members who intervened to stop the courier in mid - flight and compel the return of the secret data.

Even though this tale is largely eyewash, you may see it blossoming shortly in big headlines. The disturbing thing is that this latest "incident" appears to have been inspired from within the AEC itself.

A minor controversy over information which an AEC scientist was to supply to British atomic workers is apparently the only base for the new campaign. The word "courier" gives it a cloak-and-dagger sound it would not otherwise have.

They Worked Together.

WHAT makes this eyewash, however, is the fact that as a result of the wartime co-operation between the United States, Britain and Canada in the atomic energy project, Britain and Canada have all the essential information on atomic fission and the making of atomic bombs from fissionable material.

That was made clear in the testimony of Robert F. Bacher before the Senate-House committee investigation of Senator Hickenlooper's charges against Lilienthal.

Bacher, a former AEC member, now has an important position directing research at the California Institute of Technology. Like so much of the "defense testimony," Bacher's remarks got considerably less attention than the original reckless charges.

He described how British and Canadian scientists worked closely together during the war with the United States at the Los Alamos, N. M., atomic laboratory, contributing ideas to the development of the bomb.

They had a thorough and complete knowledge of all the bomb work. As to the present status Bacher made his significant statement:

"The British have an atomic energy project. They are setting about the production of fissionable material and have announced that they are developing and intend to produce atomic weapons. I am sure they will be successful in this undertaking. They have all of the technical know-how, all of the scientific background that is necessary for such a development and I believe it is only a question of time until they do produce bombs."

At the same time under close questioning by Rep. Henry Jackson of Washington, Bacher expressed his belief that the United States was way out in front of every other country on atomic development.

Along with other witnesses he testified that the civilian commission has made remarkable strides in improving the type of bomb and increasing production.

Slump May Explain Soviet Policy Shift

By DREW PEARSON

Editor's Note—This is the second of a series of columns in which Drew Pearson analyzes the highly important, but little understood, economic crisis in Great Britain.)

* * *

WASHINGTON—Here are two international developments which may or may not be related.

1. In contrast to other years, there is not a sign of military activity on the Russian horizon. American intelligence, steadily improving behind the Iron Curtain, reports that never at any time since V - J day has there been less sign of military preparation.

As far as the eye can tell, all is serene.

2. Last spring, Europe was booming. Business seemed better than ever. The Marshall Plan was hailed as a great success. At that time, Russia for the first time adopted a conciliatory policy. U. S. diplomats at the United Nations almost keeled over when the Russians first proposed ending the Berlin blockade. At long last it looked as if Moscow realized the Marshall Plan was working and it would be wise for the Kremlin to be conciliatory.

Then two things happened:

During the few brief weeks between the preliminary talks in April and May and the calling of the Paris conference in June appeared the first cracks of economic depression. British business began to slump. American unemployment rose.

Immediately Russian policy shifted. At Paris, Vishinsky was polite but obstinate. The Paris conference was a failure. In Berlin, the blockade was only partly lifted.

Thus it looked as if the Russians figured the big break they had been looking for—depression—had arrived. Also they probably figured that the more sabre-rattling in Moscow, the more money spent on armament in Washington, with more resultant industrial activity and business prosperity. Likewise the less military activity behind the Iron Curtain, the more chance of economic doldrums outside the Iron Curtain.

But whatever the Russians figured, this has been the result. And none of us have to do any figuring to know also that what Moscow has wanted most is world-wide depression — after which she could go around picking up the remaining pieces of the capitalist system.

* * *

Causes Of Crisis.

AN EARLIER column dealt with the causes of the British monetary collapse—which also extends in varying degree to other west European countries. Briefly those causes are failure to produce as much as Europe eats, which is induced, in turn, by lack of labor efficiency, outmoded machinery and the loss of Asiatic colonies.

There is also another important—failure of the Marshall Plan to cope with Europe's basic problem of economic barriers.

When this writer was in Europe with the friendship train, farsighted Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza Remarked:

"Our only salvation is a United States of Europe. We can never be economically self-supporting as long as we are cut up by Nationalistic boundaries. Moreover, we will never abolish war until we banish Nationalism.

"And we won't banish nationalism by ourselves. We can only do it if you put the pressure on. You can do it through the Marshall Plan. You are the only people who can make us set up a United States of Europe. But you will have to be tough. Otherwise the Marshall Plan will be only a chapter--a pleasant chapter, but a passing one."

* * *

Plan's Weak Spot.

COUNT SFORZA was right. The British crisis has proved that the Marshall Plan is going to be a pleasant, passing chapter--pleasant for Europe, but not for the American taxpayer.

Marshall Plan administrators have tried to get goods exchanged between European countries; and in a minor way they have succeeded. But they have not been tough. They have broken down no real barriers.

One reason is that we put the cart before the horse. We put the Marshall Plan before the Atlantic Pact.

For instance, it is impossible to persuade France that she does not need her own exclusive steel industry, and that Belgium could better manufacture steel for her, as long as there is no political alliance in western Europe guaranteeing steel to France in case of war.

Now that Belgium and France are aligned under the North Atlantic Pact—or better still in some future United States of Europe--then the need of each little country to have its own industrial steel industry is not so vital.

The same might be true of Italy's Fiat automobiles. If European trade barriers and political boundaries were broken down, one or two auto factories could supply all Europe's needs. Because of boundaries, the Fiat plant in Italy has only a skimpy, improverished market; likewise the Renault auto plant in France, the Austin in England, and so on. Their markets, hemmed in by nationalist barriers, in the eyes of a Detroit manufacturer, aren't worth sneezing at.

Yet each country is determined to keep up its motor production, partly because automobile plants can be turned into tank and airplane factories. With the north Atlantic Pact, this is less necessary. With a United States of Europe, it would not be necessary at all.

* * *

Marshall Plan Retarded.

THE Marshall Plan not only failed to do more than nibble at this problem, it actually retarded badly needed reforms.

Italy, for instance, will never be anywhere near self-supporting until the great landed estates of south Italy are broken up and reclamation projects created to protect the land from drought.

But when the De Gasperi government approached this, Marshall Plan Administrator James Zellerbach raised his hands in holy horror. The U. S. Congress, he said, wouldn't approve. Breaking up Italy's big estates was socialism. The result might be, he warned, that Italy's Marshall Plan money would be cut off.

Mr. Zellerbach's family are efficient manfacturers of paper. But his ignorance about European reconstruction only substantiates count Sforza's prediction that the Marshall Plan would be only a chapter in Europe's struggle for a sound economy—a pleasant chapter, but a passing one.

Note—Another Drew Pearson column on whether we face a creeping, world-wide depression will follow soon.)

Frankly Speaking

Up or Down, Which?

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON — "If" is the big word in where we are heading, up or down.

American economy is still at high speed, but it's sliding down hill. Compare today with a year ago:

Unemployment — almost 4,000,000, about double what it was a year ago; production — running 13 per cent less; corporation profits — around 13 per cent less; farm income — down 8 per cent.

Will it get better? Worse? Will we tumble into a depression?

Some of the top economists can't give a flat "Yes" or "No" answer. When you cut through all their big words, the main point is "If."

They think things will get better — after a little more sliding down — if business, labor, consumers and the government do certain things. They suggest some remedies and — if — the country follows the prescription, then things ought to level off and be all right again.

This was made clear in two big and important reports by four outstanding economists.

One was by President Truman's three - man Council of Economic Advisers. They work for the government.

The other was by Robert Nathan, hired by the CIO to make a special report on what's happening. When he worked for the governemtnt a few years ago, he was one of its most important economists.

* * *

From Two Viewpoints.

THE President's council took 125 long - winded pages to state its case. In much tighter prose, Nathan took 50 pages. But when economists handle the language, you have to use tweezers to take it apart.

The President's three - man council said:

"There is considerable possibility that present adjustments will lead, after some further declines this summer, to an increase in production."

(Things will get worse before they get better, if they get better.)

They went on:

"But there is still reason for real concern that the present slack may take a more serious recessionary turn, or not be succeeded by an expansion to satisfactory levels of employement and production."

(In fact, things may not get better at all, but get much worse.)

They continued:

"Consequently, it is necessary to approach the situation with positive and constructive measures, rather than to assume that the recuperative factors at work are adequate in themselves."

(In fact, things may not get

(If we want things to get better, we'd better do something to make them better. Letting nature take its course won't help.)

But to show they're really optimistic, after all, the three-man council says they "find the prospect reassuring."

Nathan, who gets to his point a lot faster, says that "business will get worse before it gets better seems beyond dispute."

How much worse? That, Nathan says, is a "moot question." But he adds:

"There are no firm indications that a major depression is imminent nor that a definite upturn is in prospect within the next few months."

Then Nathan and the President's economic advisers suggest various medicines for getting us out of the present tailspin and on most of their recommendations they agree.

Economists are not scientists nor are they perfect prophets. They're men who add two and two to try to get four, and they're not always right. Nathan says:

"Economics is by no means an exact science, but enough is known to permit not only an intelligent diagnosis but also general corrective prescriptions."

Dave Boone Says:

There is this about England: she knows when she is in serious financial trouble and really bothers to get worried.

* * *

Over here in America we don't, as a people, give a thing like that a thought. Sir Stafford Cripps tells the British they are in such a hole they will have to tighten their belts even more in the austerity program.

* * *

In this country we think tightening a belt means the fan belt in the limousine. And a lot of folks think they are showing austerity when they drive the smaller car to the bureau for the security or pension payment.

You Can Build Happiness

By ELSIE ROBINSON

YOU ARE NOT happy—you say? You wonder if you ever will be happy again? I do not know. I can only tell you something I have discovered about happiness. Perhaps that will help.

Once happiness came without effort or plan. . . . .as naturally as the sunrise, the sweep of the glittering tide. I had youth. I had curiosity and conceit. Best of all, I had love.

Then suddenly all that was swept away. Life became a brooding desolation. Everything was over. My happiness was gone.

At first I did not care. But life does not let us stay that way. Life demands that we shall go on living—go on desiring. And so I began to wish that happiness would come back to me but I felt that I, myself, could do nothing about it. It would just have to happen—without my volition.

I waited for happiness to come back, but it did not come. Weeks, months, years I waited and my life was going stagnant for happiness did not come back to me.

Then dimly I began to perceive that I was wrong. Happiness would not, could not, ever come back that way. For that sort of involuntary happiness was part of something that had gone forever. It was part of youth—part of the exuberance and ignorance of youth—part of youth's irresponsibility and it could not possibly continue when life became older and wiser and more responsible.

At last I realized that happiness must be planned for, fought for, achieved. And so I learned to build happiness.

I decided to be happy. I decided to find happiness and I began looking for it.

* * *

Joy In Small Things.

I began looking for it in every common incident of my life. I took joy wherever I found it—in trifling experiences, in fleeting moods, in brief glimpses. It wasn't easy at first. It was like going through a complicated, tiresome, senseless drill. But I persisted.

And gradually something began to stir in me. . .warm in me. . . .and I saw that my life held happiness again.

Not the radiance and ecstasy I had once known but a deliberate delight which could find food for joy in the most barren places-and which no grief or loss could ever shake again.

So I came to build happiness. You can too, if you will.

Friendly Mansfield Atmosphere Impresses Refugees

City Reminds Yugoslavs of Old Home

Four Yugoslavian refugee immigrants describe Mansfield as being very similar to their old home town of Cservenka, Yugoslavia.

The refugee family arrived in Mansfield after three years of negotiations by relatives here and an immigrant agent.

Gottfried Brumm, 130 Blanche street, met his sister-in-law Auria Roth, 50, her husband Philip, 53 and their two children Albert, 21, and Paula, 18 at the dock in New York last week and drove them to Mansfield. The Roth family has spent most of its time here marveling at American refrigerators and other items.

But modern conveniences or not, the Roths think that Mansfield has the same friendly, small town atmosphere they enjoyed in Yugoslavia until five years ago.

The Roths were forced to abandon their home when the retreating Germans took over the town in an effort to stop the onrushing Russians. Roth and his family fled to southern Bavaria where they lived for a year while working on a farm.

For the past four years the Roths have lived in Munich. Albert, a watch repairman, made about the quivalent of six dollars a week in American money. His father worked at his trade of tailoring and with his wife and daughter helping, they made just enough money to live on.

Just enough that is, with the regular packages of food and clothing that arrived from the Brumm family in Mansfield.

"We are so thankful for what Mr. and Mrs. Brumm have done for us—we couldn't have gotten along without them," Philip Roth said through interpreter Anton Knefely, Saturday.

The elder Roth had a job awaiting him when he landed in New York after sailing from Europe on the S. S. Marine Flasher of the U. S. Lines. Roth will start work Monday at Gerber Cleaners, 160 S. Main. The immigrants will live with the Brumm family.

The Roths were admitted to the U. S. through regular immigration procedures. Knefely had at first tried getting them in as displaces persons, but when Roth was promised a job the immirgration papers were made out.

Albert has already discovered that he likes American girls. A young lady friend of the Brumms took him out for a ride in her car the first night he was in town. Albert and his father have tried and approved American beer. And the entire family likes picnics a la Mansfield.

Asks $3,040 Judgment In Pipeline Suit

Other County Action Seeks Lease Ending

Two actions were yesterday in common pleas court — one seeking a money judgment and another seeking to have a lease canceled.

Monterey Simmons sued the Ohio Fuel Gas company for $3,040 for damages to his property in Worthington township, resulting when a pipeline was laid there by the Mahoney Construction company, employed by the gas company.

Simmons claims the gas company did not obtain an easement to cross his property to install the pipeline. He asks the sum for unlawful trespass, claiming a spring, and nine trees were destroyed and other trees badly bruised. Other damages including destruction of 20 rods of fence, the petition said. Attorney V. A. Benehoff of Tiffin represents Simmons.

In the other action, Mrs. Elina Prinz, of 57 East Fourth street, wants a lease for a store room at her property canceled. Listed as defendants are Ned. H. Schmitzer and Sam Pilaia, of 55 East Fourth street, who leased the store room at that address.

Mrs. Prinz says the lease carried an option for renewal providing there was no waste. She claims they committed waste in using electricity needlessly, which she paid for, in permitting a man to use the business premises for a sleeping room, and in permitting the premises to be used for gambling purposes in that they have a pin ball machine for use of the public. She adds that no rent has been paid since May 16. Attorney H. G. Clark represents Mrs. Prinz.

State Road Chief Tells Of Shortages

Commissioner Group Gathers In Galion

GALION — State highways, their development and improvement, was discussed by Theodore J. Kauer, state director of highways, Monday evening when he addressed 100 attending the meeting of the Central Northwestern Ohio Association of County Commissioners at the Fairway Club, east of the city

An expenditure of $2,000,000,000 would put Ohio's highway system in top flight condition, according to Kauer, who said that at the present time only $6,000,000 is available to match annual federal funds, of $18,000,000.

Wartime manpower shortage has contributed to the deterioration of the state's highways, while passenger vehicles and trucks have increased 25 per cent. However, he pledged full support of the highway department to county commissioners and engineers

Sandusky county was voted into the group which includes Crawford, Delaware, Hardin, Logan, Marion, Morrow, Seneca, Union, Wyandott, and Hancock counties.

Crawford county representatives were Walter Sargel, Earl R. Leonard, Roy Eichhorn, Oliver Hartman, Frederick Klein, Fred Ernst, Harold Dinkel, Kels A. Poister, Ralph E. Schrieck, C C. Metzger, Robert Down, James Atkinson and A F Unckrich. The commissioners were guests of C F Boyd, vice president of the Galion Iron Works and Manufacturing company, John C. For An Extra Hour In the Sun, Fix Dinner In Morning

A fine summer day is a wonderful thing. But what good does it do you if you can't get out in the sunshine and feel the soft breeze blowing.

One way to get an extra hour of afternoon in the sun is to prepare your dinner in the morning, ready to pop in the oven just before meal-time. Here is a simple, delicious menu that is made-to-order for homemakers.

Fish'n' Chips Casserole
Potato Chips Baked Carrots
Coffee Walnut Muffin
Fruited Gelatin Dessert Salad

The fish casserole, the carrots and the dessert salad can be quickly prepared right after breakfast. All you need to do, come dinner time, is to heat the oven to 375 degrees F., bake the casserole dish and the carrots, and, while they are in the oven, quickly mix the batter for the coffee walnut muffin loaf. After that has been done, make a big potful of fragrant, steaming coffee, fill a bowl with crisp potato chips, and there you are — an easy-to-do dinner that your family is sure to like.

The dessert salad may be served with the main course or later, as a separate dessert course. In any case, be sure to make enough coffee to provide for that leisurely second cup — the perfect ending for a happy meal.

FISH'N' CHIPS CASSEROLE

1 can condensed cream of celery soup.
1-3 cup light cream.
1 3-oz. can sliced mushrooms
1 7-oz. can tuna
1 2-oz. bag potato chips

Combine soup, cream and mushrooms (Including liquor in can). Drain tuna. Crush potato chips into crumbs. Arrange layers of crumbs, tuna and soup mixture in small casserole, beginning and ending with crumbs. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F,. ½ hour. Yield: 4 servings.

BAKED CARROTS

Scrape small carrots; leave whole. Place in baking dish. Add ½ cup water. Dot with butter or margarine; sprinkle with sugar. Cover; bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., 45 minutes or until tender. Sprinkle with chopped fresh mint.

COFFEE WALNUT LOAF

Add ½ cup chopped walnuts to 1 package muffin mix. Instead of the liquid called for, add double-strength coffee and evaporated milk combined in equal proportions. Pour into greased pie pan. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees F., about 20 minutes or until done. Cut in small wedges to serve.

DESSERT SALAD

1 pkg. cherry flavored gelatin
1 pkg. (3-oz.) cream cheese
2 cups water
1 cup halved, seeded grapes
1 banana, sliced.

Dissolve gelatin in water as directed on package. Pour a thin layer into mold. Chill until set. Form cream cheese into small balls, place in mold on set gelatin. Chill remaining gelatin until syrupy; fold in fruit. Spoon carefully into mold over cheese balls. Chill until set. Unmold on water cress. Serve with cream mayonnaise (half mayonnaise, half whipped cream). Yield: 6 servings.

Some Don'ts for Pimples

Don't scratch — don't squeeze pimples — you risk infection! Don't suffer from itching pimples, angry red blotches, eczema or other irritations when soothing Peterson's Ointment offers you fast relief. Makes skin look better, feel better. 40c all druggists. One application delights or money back. Peterson's Ointment allays itchy feet, cracks between toes. —Adv.

Good Grooming Out of Luggage

On your vacation this summer, you can appear perfectly groomed even though you might be living out of a suitcase. It's all a matter of using your ingenuity in packing small amounts of your favorite toiletries.

If you haven't room in your luggage for a whole box of your favorite bath salts, slip a handful of your pet brand into an envelope, and seal it, so that it can't spill over your clothes. For a week-end jaunt, scoop some face cream into an aspirin tin.

On a long trip, improvise, and have your stand-by bottle of hand lotion serve as a cleanser, skin softner, and freshner. Collect tiny cakes of soap, and fill empty nooks of your suitcase with them. Carry cosmetics in stick form--hand cream, anti-perspirant, stick cologne. They're small and even better, they're unbreakable. Some cleansing pads now come in their own compact container. There are deodorant pads in the same form.

And remember, on a long train trip, to carry a fresh pair of gloves in your bag, and a tiny purse size vial of cologne.

First In Panel Air Heating -- Remlong's Tin Shop

Furnace-Blacked Dust Nuisance Eliminated

Novel System Uses Radiant Heat From 'Sealed' Air

A hot air heating system which admits heat, but not the air, into the rooms of a house is proving its merit in several local installations.

Although this new type of radiant heating is widely used in some parts of the nation, it is still a novelty in Mansfield and vicinity.

Stated briefly, the system heats by radiation from hot air released in a false ceiling space provided for this purpose. Any type of pressure furnace can be used. Heated air moves through ducts, much the same manner as with ordinary hot air heating.

But air is not released through registers It moves through the false ceiling, guided by baffles, to an outlet which returns to the furnace.

ELIMINATES DIRT

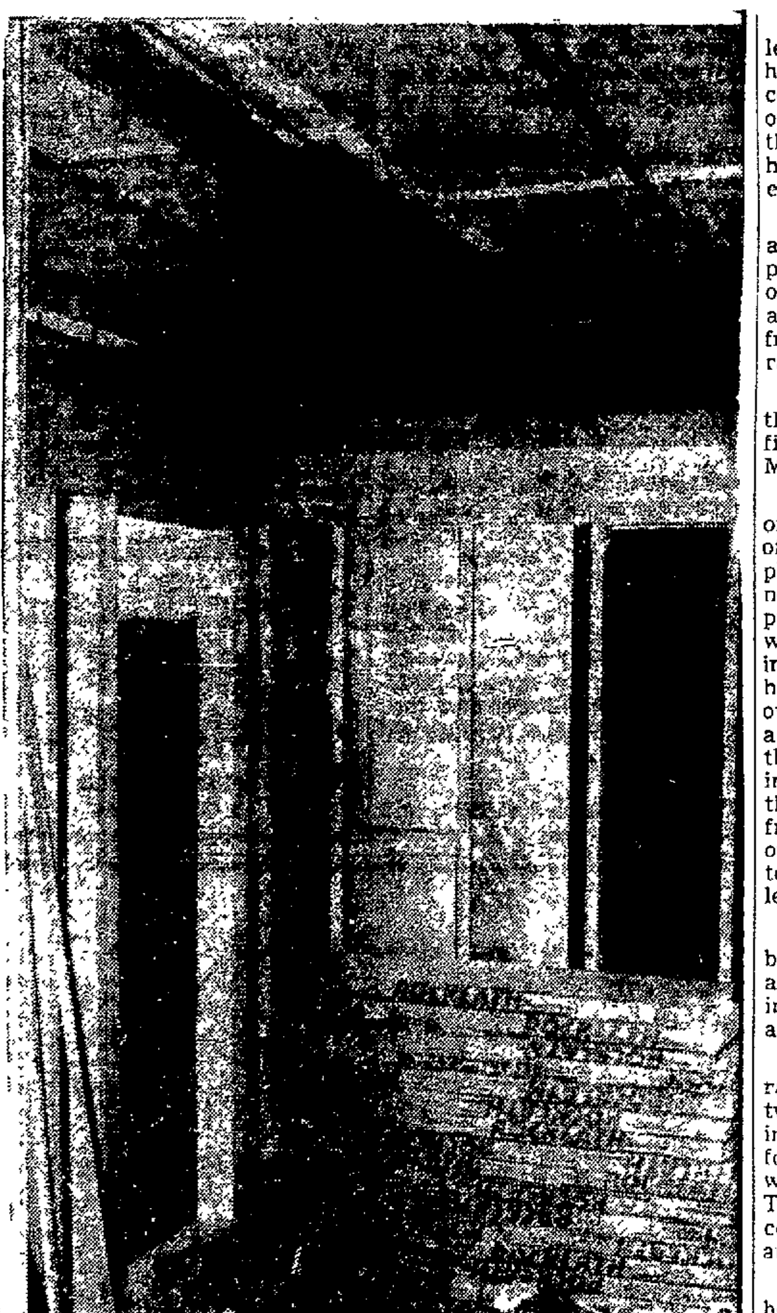
Thus there are no air currents, no temperature variations throughout the room, and lastly—a point which is probably of the most interest to housewives — no dirt. Since the air which comes in contact with the furnace never enters the rooms, there are no heat-blacked dust particles to soil walls and curtains.

M. P. Remlong, who opened the Remlong Tin shop in Mansfield after returning from naval service, has been specializing in radiant hot air heating for the past two years. His first experimental installation in the Earl McFarland home on South Main St., has been subjected to numerous tests which it has met successfully.

TESTS CONDUCTED

In one test thermometers were placed in corners, near the ceiling and on the floor. There was no variation in temperature at any of these points, Remlong declared.

Insulation is placed above the false ceiling to prevent loss of heat upward. The ceiling is suspended by hooks which support metal rods Metal lath is attached to the rods, and plastering is then done in the usual manner.



PANEL AIR HEATING

In a house heated by Panel Heating the house has no registers. The heat is transferred to the room by heat rays which come from ducts in the ceilings. The heat rays from the ceilings heat the entire house. By using this system you are completely free of dirt. It marks advancement and achievement in the heating field.

The heating system does not lend itself to installation in an old house, unless the building is being completely remodeled. Provision of open space above the ceiling, although easily handled during house construction, would require extensive work in an old house.

Oil, gas or stoker-fed coal furnaces can be used. The blower pressure is set higher than in the ordinary hot air heating systems, and temperature of air moving from the furnace is kept within a range of 90 to 120 degrees.

One of the few installations of the new heating system in Mansfield is in the new home of Earl McFarland, local insurance man.

CEILING HEAT — Installation of radiant air heating in the home of Robert Ridenour, now completed, shows main features of the novel system. Top black arrow in picture points to one of the hooks which supports the ceiling, leaving an open space through which heated air from furnace moves over room. Lower arrow points to a baffle, which is used to direct the air in panels across the ceiling. Inlet ducts leading through the walls are shown at back. Air from all rooms leads to a central outlet duct which carries it back to the furnace without being released.

REMLONG'S TIN SHOP will be the first in Mansfield to install a new, revolutionary type of heating. This heating system is known as Panel Air Heating.

The heat comes from rays or radiation from air ducts between two ceilings. The heating plant is in the basement. The warm air is forced through ducts to the space which is allowed in the ceilings The warm air flows through the ceiling. Heat rays are given off and penetrate through the room.

This new revolutionary type of heating system has the following advantages:

1. The air does not enter the house, therefore there is no dirt.

2. Heating by radiation means that there will be no drafts.

3. A thermometer placed any place within the room will indicate a uniform temperature.

4. The air goes back to the furnace warm. The rise in temperature is not as great as ordinary heating devices, therefore you have the advantage of fuel economy.

Rain may leave unsightly spotted effects when it hits fresh paint. Rub the spotted surface with alcohol which will help restore the original color.

Mrs. George Davis Tells of Trip To Washington At Picnic

Seventy-five members of the Dolly Madison Club and their guests attended the informal picnic party held last evening at the cabin of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Underwood, Orphan Knoll, near Mifflin Lake. A covered dish dinner was served on the lawn early in the evening, after which talks were given by Charles Anglin, Democratic candidate for mayor, George Connor, president of city council, and Mrs. George Davis, president of the club.

Mrs. Davis told of an interesting trip to Washington, D. C. which she and Mr. Davis took recently. They were the guests of Mr. Davis' brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Lee, who were celebrating their 54th anniversary.

During the visit in Washington, Mrs. Davis spent some time in the headquarters of the Women's Division of the national committee. She met Mrs. India Edwards and Mrs. Blackburn, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, Mrs. Ella Roller, labor consultant, and many of the department heads.

The Davises had reserved seats in the Senate gallery during the last session of the Senate, before the closing of the chambers for remodeling. Mr. and Mrs. Davis, together with Congressman-at-large Steven M. Young, were guests of Congressman John McSweeney at luncheon in the Congressional Restaurant.

A telegram of regret was read from Atty. General Herbert Duffey, who had been invited to attend the meeting here.

Announcement was made that Mrs. George Biddie, program chairman, and Mrs. Don Orewiler, are both ill at their homes.

Mrs. George Marks served as chairman of the meeting, assisted by Mrs. Roy Webber, Mrs. Mae Karrer, Mrs. Joe Santoro, Mrs. Frank Robinson, Mrs. Alma Case, Mrs. William Frankeberger, Mrs. Della Gandert, Mrs. Mae Ross, Mrs. C. C. Herrick, Mrs. William Bell, Mrs. C. C. Minard, Mrs. Fred Wagner and Mrs. Clarence Fisher.

There will be no August meeting. On September 6 at 7:30 p. m. members will meet at the home of Mrs. C. L. Wagner, 519 Park avenue west. Guest speakers will be Paul Kelly and Peter Mayer, who will speak on "City Government". Mrs. C. L. Mitchell will serve as chairman.

Beta Phi Mu Hears Mr. Golz

Mrs. Dolen Goodner called the meeting of Beta Phi Mu sorority to order Tuesday evening in the clubrooms of the Hotel Southern.

It was voted on to have a family weiner roast August 14. Plans and arrangements are in charge of Mrs. Kenneth Fry, chairman, Mrs. James Doops, Mrs. John Them and Mrs. Pete Fenton. Plans were made to incorporate the organization.

Herb Golz was guest speaker for the evening.

The next regular business session will be held August 9 in the clubrooms of the Southern.

Papa Dons Gaudy Attire, Is Now Known As Eighth Wonder of World

THE AMERICAN HUSBAND has become the eighth wonder of the modern world.

The other seven are (1) Sophie Tucker, (2) the Berlin airlift, (3) the four-dollar British pound, (4) the Empire State building, (5) Texas and/or California, (6) Soviet Russia's foreign policy and (7) Joseph Paul Di Maggio, the Yankee clipper.

Like "Di Mag," the U.S. husband is enjoying one of the greatest comebacks in history.

Time was when he was merely a crass beast of labor responsible only for bringing home the bacon. The rest of the time he was just an over-stuffed lump of protoplasm that sank into an over-stuffed piece of furniture and gave off annoyed grunts when disturbed.

But all that's changed. Papa's a new man. Mama has to call him "Daddy" again now—and she has a hard time keeping up with him.

She can't afford to let herself get frowzy and fat. Papa's taken the inner tubes off his midriff, and if she doesn't do likewise, why, he puts her on a 9-day diet. He knows what grub has the most vitamins and grows the least blubber. He doles out her calories like a miser.

This 1949 husband is a bird of fresh plumage. He's doffed the dun uniforms he's worn for the last fifty years. No longer does he back away from pastel shirts or shy from summer neckties that look like a cross-section of the northern lights. Pap's discovered color--and he likes it. He is also the first one under the family suntan lamp and the last to leave.

Yes, sir, the old man seems to have made up his mind that anything his old lady can do he can do better. He's got mama taking lessons in interior decoration, and he thumbs through the ladies' magazines looking for new recipes he can amaze the neighbors with. He may leave the kitchen a mess, but when have you ever tasted a more wonderful salad? (The garlic flavor usually dies out of your tonsils in three days.)

Papa isn't satisfied with just dishing out the weekly household budget money. He's become a bargain hunter himself now. He prowls the shops on his days off like a beagle hound looking for the cheaper pork chop, the sale-priced sports shirt.

"These men shoppers are worse than the women ever were," growled our family butcher the other day. "And the way they watch the scales--you'd think they never saw an honest man in their life."

Some time back I wrote a piece about how papa was taking more interest in household affairs. Back came a number of hooting letters from unbelieving ladies saying: "What husbands?--not mine!"

Well, girls, it's true. Papa's going to give you more and more competition around the place. He's discovered that keeping house is fun--as long as you don't have to do it all the time. And he's going to take more of a hand in it.

I know a telegraph editor out in Joplin, Mo., who told his wife she ought to make her own clothes.

"If it's so easy, why don't you do it?" she said.

Darned if he didn't. Now he makes clothes for the whole family.

In Alabama the husbands are getting so good at camellia growing they take the prizes at flower shows that their wives used to win.

"Well, at least it keeps them out of pool rooms," said one frustrated lady.

The low-down in business is making husbands even more thrifty. Recently a friend of mine went into a store to buy some hand-knit wool socks. The price --$7.50 a pair--shocked him.

"I can make them cheaper than that," he said.

2-Foot Putt Trips Hager In 1st Round

Mansfielder Trails By One

By missing a two-foot putt on the ninth hole, Mansfield's Al Hager was behind one hole in his first nine holes against Tom Jones of Youngstown this morning in the 43rd Ohio Amateur golf tournament at Westbrook Country club.

Hager, who is co-medalist of the tournament and is rated as one of the favorites for the 1949 championship, went four over par on the nine holes. His slip on the short putt put him one down in the opening match.

Pete Thoma, the public links star who plays out of Coolridge, and Westbrook's Dale Rose were making runaways of their matches. Thoma was four up on Chick Evans of Urbana, while Rose toured the first nine in even par to go five up on Don Vitangeli of Canton. Thoma was two under par and missed an eagle three on the eighth hole when a 15-foot putt failed to drop by two inches.

Two other Westbrook members, Carl Wiseman and Bob Carpenter, were even at the nine-hole turn. Max McConnell, Coshocton, led Zanesville's Bob Rankin by two holes. McConnell, was runner-up for the 1946 crown.

In the battle of champions, Harold Paddock of Chagrin Falls was one up on Chick Hendrickson of Sandusky. Paddock is the defending champion while Hendrickson won the national caddie championship three years ago.

Thirty-two first round matches are scheduled today with the second and third rounds scheduled tomorrow. Finals in the tournament are scheduled over the 36-hole route Saturday. Qualifying rounds Monday and Tuesday cut the huge field of 183 to 64 for today's matches.

Bad Luck Hits Twice

Crash Victims In Airplane Mishap

Two persons injured in an auto crash near Mansfield Saturday ran into more bad luck yesterday when the small plane they had chartered made an emergency landing in a cornfield near Unity, Md.

The plane was carrying former WAC, Mrs. Hilda Louise Bushman, 34, of Laurel, Md. to Mt. Alto veterans hospital for surgical treatment of a broken back. She was injured when an auto crashed into a tree on U. S. Route 30, five miles east of the city Mrs. Bushman was strapped to a stretcher in the plane which was piloted by W. H. Shafer, 34, 282 Elmwood Drive.

Mrs. Bushman, the pilot and her uncle, Frank E. Tydings, were shaken up but not injured in the landing. Tydings received a fractured ankle in the automobile crash.

Police said the plane was scheduled to land at National airport at Washington, 27 miles from Unity, but was unable to get clearance for some unexplained reason.

The plane took off a short time later and reached the National airport by 6:30 p. m.

Major General Speaks

Hanley Calls Men Real Power

CONGRATULATIONS, DAD!—Maj. Gen. T. J. Hanley jr., Washington, D. C., chats with his father on the latter's 90th birthday which was observed yesterday noon with special ceremonies at the meeting of the Rotary club in the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

"Man power is the basis of the armed forces of the United States, regardless of any stories of guided missles and other secret weapons," Mag. Gen. Thomas J. Hanley said at a Rotary luncheon Tuesday at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Gen Hanley who is serving with the military personnel procurement service in Washington, told the Rotarians that they should consider members of the armed forces as part of the community — even though they no longer live at home. Gen. Hanley's father, Thomas J. Hanley, celebrated his 90th birthday by attending the luncheon.

The growth of the country and of the armed forces since 1859, the year his father was born, was outlined by Gen. Hanley. "In 1859 there was only 15,000 men in the United States Army, during World War II there were 17 million men in the armed forces and at the present time there are 1,600,000," Gen. Hanley said.

"We are soldier-citizens — you are citizen — soldiers. I am very much afraid that when the great majority of men in uniform during world war II were discharged and returned to civilian life that the heart went out of the relationship between servicemen and civilians," Maj. Gen. Hanley added.

"The main purpose of the armed forces is to be ready to expand and defend in time of emergency," Gen. Hanley declared.

Preceeding the luncheon the elder Hanley was presented a special rotary button by Atty. J. H. Gongwer. Maj. William J. Jones, of the Salvation Army, led the rotarians in singing "Happy Birthday" to Mr. Hanley. They also sang Hanley's favorite song "My Wild Irish Rose."

Gen. Hanley was introduced by his brother J. O. Hanley, of Mansfield. Other members of the Hanley family present included Rev. Father Dexter Hanley, son of General Hanley; Hanley's daughter, Mrs. Ramey Curtis, of Columbus, and her two sons; and Hanley's daughter Miss Veronica Hanley of Mansfield.

Allowed $280 Attorney Fee

Attorney Theodore Lutz has been allowed a fee of $280 as the court-appointed lawyer for Miss Dixie Opal Nunley, 22, sentenced to the Marysville Reformatory in the death of her new-born baby.

Common Pleas Judge G. E Kalbfleisch certified to the county auditor that Lutz be allowed that sum for his services on behalf of Miss Nunley, a journal entry shows. The entry said that Lutz had investigated the facts in the case and had prepared for trial.

Miss Nunley was indicted on a charge of second degree murder by the grand jury. She pleaded innocent. Prosecutor Harold Lutz on June 15 moved that the charge be reduced to first degree manslaughter and Miss Nunley, through her attorney, pleaded guilty to that charge. She received a sentence of one to 20 years.

Man, 26, Held For Parole Violation

Elbart R. Richardson, 26, alias Albert R. Richardson, Newman hotel, was arrested by police for violation of parole yesterday and committed to the county jail. Richardson's arrest was ordered by a state parole officer.

Richardson, listed as "Elbart R." on Mansfield reformatory records, was received at the OSR on March 26, 1948 from Lucas county to serve one to 15 years for burglary and grand larceny.

Library Remodeling Project Under Way

One of the largest remodeling projects on a public building in Mansfield since the war is now under way at the Mansfield Public Library.

Work on the program was begun last week after the library board signed contracts totaling $122,410.71. In addition to this amount for general construction, electrical work, and plumbing and heating, will be the cost of new equipment for the enlarged rooms when the project is completed.

Working capital for the project includes $130,000 raised in two bond issues in the past four years in the city and approximately $5,000 which has been built up in a building fund over a number of years.

When the remodeling is completed in approximately six months, the library will have a new look both inside and out.

One of the most noticeable changes will be the removal of the bank in front of the building to make a street-level entrance. What is now the main entrance to the library will be a balcony when work is completed.

The building will be extended to the rear to provide additional stack space on the main floor and a new room for the county department in what is now the basement. A garage for the book-mobile will be built at the rear of the library building.

New restrooms for the public and staff members will be installed in the basement in what formerly was the mending room.

The children's room will be moved to the basement (which will then be the ground floor) and there will be a general shifting of all departments which now occupy basement space.

Work at the library is going ahead rapidly. Workmen already have built a temporary wall at the rear of the main floor so the permanent wall may be torn down. When the permanent wall is removed, building the extension at the rear will get underway.

At present workmen are tearing out walls in the basement and putting in some of the new walls which will divide departments on that floor.

Although some reference material will not be available during the change-over, most books in the general collection will be in circulation as usual.

Staff members already are sorting and reshelf-ing material which had to be moved when work was begun last week. Periodicals of the last five years have been sorted and put back on shelves and again are available for general use.

TOO REALISTIC—

A too realistic game of "cowboy and indians" had a Mansfield mother worried yesterday afternoon. She phoned the police and said some boys had tied her son to a tree in King's woods and built a fire under him. Police questioned the youths and were told "we were just playing cowboy and indians". They admitted they tied the one boy to a tree, but denied any fire was built under him. The police officers told the boys to play more carefully.

Sale Draws Big Crowd

The largest crowd of Mansfield shoppers to visit the M. O'Neil company since it opened its doors in December of 1946 jammed the aisles of the store by 10 a. m. today, Jack Miller, manager, reported.

Before the doors opened at 9:30 a m an estimated 400 persons thronged about the front, waiting for the Remnant Day sale to open officially.

Miller declined to estimate the attendance today, but 15,000 customers visited the store at its grand opening and today's crowd got off to an early start towards that figure.

Miller said the store will remain open until 9 p. m. today, affording shoppers additional time to inspect merchandise.

PLANS CONVENTION

The 314th infantry regiment of the 79th infantry division will hold its third annual convention at Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 5, through Aug. 7.

Begins Change Thursday

New Quarters Open Monday

The Mansfield Board of Education will start moving into its new quarters at 75 Carpenter road tomorrow morning.

Present offices of the board in John Simpson Junior high will be closed through Saturday. The moving will be completed and the new offices opened Monday, superintendent of schools W. L. Miller said.

The board phone number will remain the same—2550-6.

The new offices will occupy eight rooms of the former E. R. Hartman home, at the corner of Marion avenue and Carpenter road and will provide space for the superintendent, clerks, business manager, supervisors, and pupil personnel.

The Marion avenue property purchased in February for $87,500 contains two and a half acres of land. The new Carpenter school building will be built on the same property. It is to have 12 rooms and an auditorium-gymnasium.

The Hartman house is a two-and one-half story structure and has 10 rooms.

The site was chosen for the board of education location after recommendation by Ohio State university specialists who made a survey here of school building needs.

The rooms vacated by the board in John Simpson building will be taken over for classrooms, probably for the music department.

Faces Grand Jury Action

Police Catch OSR Escaper

Richard Zacker, 20, Mansfield reformatory escaper, apprehended by Cleveland police yesterday while sleeping in a Cleveland branch library, will face Richland county grand jury action in September for the burglary of a Shelby dry cleaning plant, Shelby Police Chief LeRoy Coffey said today.

Detectives of the Cleveland police department said officers captured Zacker, sleeping in a branch library at 83rd and Lorain streets shortly after noon. Zacker, who escaped the institution farm here late Saturday, is expected to be returned today.

A two-year additional penalty for apprehended escape will also be added to his one to 15-year sentence for burglary.

Zacker's presence in the Snowhite Dry Cleaning plant at Shelby, burglarized early Sunday, was established when Shelby police officers found prison garb behind a brush pile at the rear of the plant. A green shirt and grey plaid trousers were missing from the cleaning plant.

Chief Coffey said Zacker will be charged with breaking and entering and that the evidence will be given to the grand jury at the opening fall session. Decision of the jury will serve as a detainer on Zacker. Coffey announced the decision after conferring with Richland County Prosecutor Harold Lutz.

Bucyrus Restoring Service On Phones

BUCYRUS — Telephone service was restored Tuesday for nearly 400 homes here but an additional 900 rural telephones still are out of service as a result of a $40,000 fire which destroyed two automatic switchboards at the Bucyrus Telephone company offices Sunday. M. R. Schneider company manager here, said today emergency telephone directories for rural subscribers, who all will receive new numbers, will be mailed Thursday. Rural telephone service is expected to be back to normal by Sunday, Schneider reported.

Flies To Greece To Surprise Sister Last Seen 37 Years Ago

Frank Thanos, 60, 303 N. Main St left last night for New York city where he will board a plane today to visit his sister in Greece. Thanos hasn't seen his sister for 37 years.

He came to the United States in 1912. At that time his sister was only 15 years old. When she wrote him that her daughter would be married in August, Thanos decided it was time to take the long awaited trip to the country where he was born.

Co-owner of the Boston Restaurant, Thanos plans to show his sister some real American cooking and in turn hopes that she can give him recipes of the latest Grecian dishes. Thanos did not notify his sister that he was coming—so his arrival should be quite a surprise.

The plane trip from New York to Athens will take only 32 hours. Thanos will have stops at Newfoundland, Azores, Lisbon, Madrid and Rome before arriving in Athens. From there he will take either a train or plane to his old home town of Larissa. He will arrive in Larissa early Friday morning. Thanos plans to stay in Greece three or four months.

A resident of Mansfield for the last 11 years, Thanos has been in the restaurant business since 1915. He started in Manchester, N. H., then spent several years in Mansfield before moving to Detroit, Mich. He came back to his "favorite town" in 1938 and has been here since.

Thanos has many relatives in Greece, but his sister is the only one he has ever seen. He expects to get well acquainted with his many nieces and nephews whom he has heard about but never met.

Begins Full-Scale War Against 'Clubs'

COLUMBUS —(UP)— Gov. Frank J. Lausche yesterday ordered departments of state government to take battle positions in the war on the Mounds club in Lake county and other organized gambling.

Lausche met with heads of various departments which have authority relating to gambling places in an hour and a half conference during which he gave the greenlight to harrassing tactics against gambling clubs.

"I am expecting that these departments will utilize fully whatever power they have to bring the operators of the Mounds club and other gambling establishments into a realization that they are not more powerful than the givernment itself," Lausche said.

He sharply criticized the open defiance exhibited by the Mounds club in re-opening shortly after a state raid last Saturday, in which four employes were arrested. The four men will face trial next week in Lake county on charges of bootlegging and resisting a state inspection.

"The brazenness and open defiance of government authority was manifested by these operators when the night after the raid, it is reliably reported, they opened their doors and proceeded to operate in the same lawless manner they have in the past," the governor said.

"The issue now," Lausche said, "is who is supreme—the county of Lake and the state of Ohio or the lawless men who operate the Mounds club and other gambling establishments."

Lausche warned that the citizens of Lake county must realize that the problem is now beyond that of illegal liquor sales and gambling. He said that the operators were declaring "that there is no power that can stop them in their racketeering practices."

Attending the conference in the governor's office were Anthony A. Rutkowski, chief of enforcement in the state liquor department, Industrial Relations Director Albert Woldman, Highway Patrol Chief George Mingle, public utilities commission Chairman Harold Mason, Commerce Director Bob Moulton, State Fire Marshal Harry J. Callan, two representatives of the BUC, and the governor's personal and executive secretaries.

The Ohio Amateur golf tournament headed into match play today at Westbrook Country club with seven Mansfield men still in the running for the crown.

Only five fell by the wayside as the field was reduced from 104 to 64 by qualifying scores yesterday. Bill Black, M. L. Ward, and Dick Hosler shot over the required 158 and Ed Blonston lost out in a sudden death playoff. Dick Koozer did not turn in a card.

Mansfield's leading contender, Al Hager, fired his way into the headlines with a 71 to be co-medalist with Danny Carmichael of Columbus at 143. Carmichael sank a 15-foot putt on the 18th green for a three-under-par 69.

Defending Champion Harold Paddock also shot a 69 yesterday as he warmed up to the course. His 141 total was low but since his qualifying was automatic, he was not eligible for the medalist trophy.

The prize, a silver cocktail shaker, will go to the winner of a special 18-hole medal playoff between Hager and Carmichael later in the week.

Carmichael, runner-up to Dow, Finsterwald of Athens in the Columbus District Amateur this year, took advantage of some precise putting to rack up his score. He failed to three-putt a single green yesterday and took three shots on only three Monday.

Hager, playing with Paddock, had to scramble for many of his pars, and one-putted several greens.

MEETS TOM JONES

Hager was to meet Tom Jones of Youngstown today while Carmichael battles Dick Cline of Ashland. Paddock and Chick Hendricksen, former National Caddy champion were to tangle in one of the better matches of the day.

One Mansfielder was sure to fall by the wayside as Carl Wiseman and Bob Carpenter square off. Other local men to qualify were Pete Thoma, Gene Zediker, Dale Rose, and Arnie Adams.

Adams had a 73 today to pair with his 76 yesterday for a 149.

Biggest gallery attraction of the tournament thus far was the extra-hole play-off of the 158's yesterday. Four men battled for three places with Ed Blonston losing out on the second extra hole with a five.

Taking part in the play-off was Gene Zediker of Westbrook, Steve Nagey of Cleveland, Bill Gressard of Kent, and Blonston. A fifth 158 shooter Carl Menelle of Youngstown, had finished early, and figuring he was out of the running, left for home.

All four failed to hit the par-four first green with their second shot as Nagey went in a sand trap, Zediker layed on the side of it and Blonston and Gressard went over.

Zediker made the best approach and holed out from about three feet while Gressard sank a five-footer.

Blonston's fourth shot hung on the lip while Nagey stopped two feet short. Both holed out for fives. Zediker and Gressard had 4's to cinch their berths.

HITS TOO LONG

On the second hole Nagey drove down the fairway but Blonston's belt was too long and slipped behind a tree on the slight dogleg. Blonston had no choice except to hit a low ball, and in doing so, he toed his shot and banged another tree. He was on in three but two putts gave him a five. Nagey's second shot rolled off the green but he got his four with little trouble.

Mansfield's runner-up of Monday, Pete Thoma, shot a 38 on the first nine and then played safe, cautious golf to come in with a 39 for 77 and a 36-hole score of 150. He was tied for 13th on the list.

Yesterday's medalist, Tom Neiporte of Cincinnati, slipped to a 75 and ended up fifth with a 145 total. Young Dow Finsterwald, the Athens sensation, was runner-up to Hager and Carmichael with 144. He had a 71 to go with his 73 of Monday.

Jack Fitzpatrick of Akron, the Notre Dame golfer, shot a 73 for a 146 total while Jack Zoller added a 76 to his 71 for a 147 total.

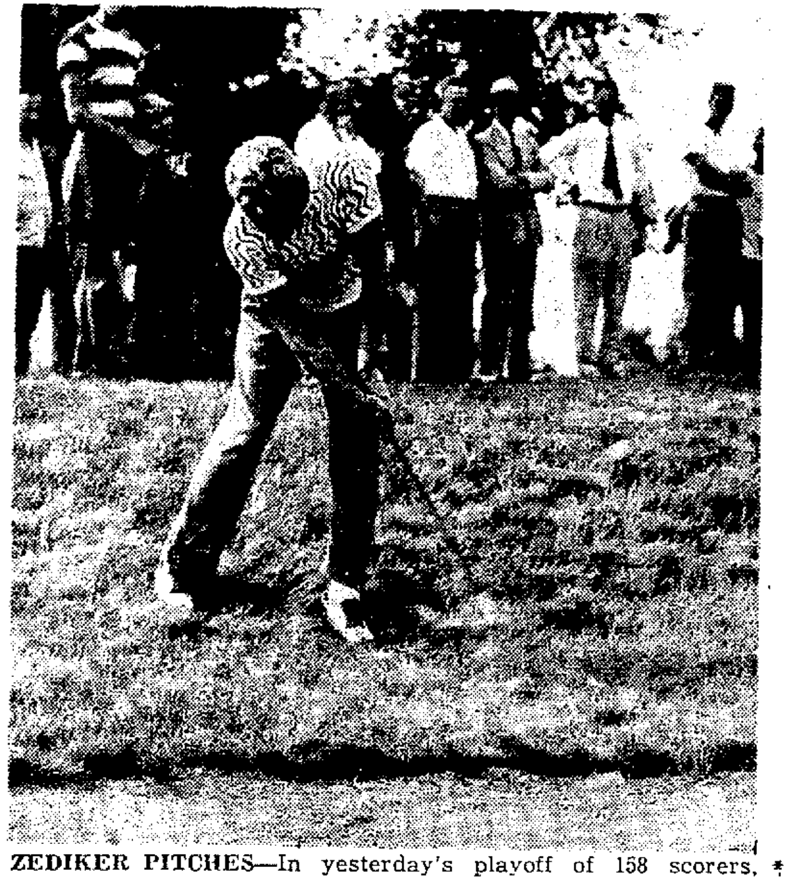
GETS PAR FOUR—Gene Zediker drops the three-foot putt which won him his berth in the match play brackets of the Ohio Amateur tournament. Zediker sank a three-footer for a par four on the first extra hole. He will meet Mort Olman of Cincinnati today. (News-Journal Photo by Jim Switzer).



ZEDIKER PITCHES—In yesterday's playoff of 158 scorers, Mansfield's Gene Zediker had probably the worst lie of the four on his second shot. Zediker, however, made a fine pitch from the side of the sand trap which kept him in the running. (News-Journal Staff Photo).

Bill Gressard Revenges Himself On First Hole

Yesterday's playoff, the first big attraction of the tournament, was sweet revenge for Bill Gressard of Kent. Gressard sank a five-foot putt on the first extra hole—number one—the same hole which caused him to be in the playoff in the first place.

It was on the same hole Monday that Gressard's caddy had been unable to pull the pin and cost the golfer three strokes.

"That's the longest one I've made in two weeks," he said as he walked off the green.

★

Dan Carmichael the Columbus veteran who tied Al Hager for medalist honors, is a former Princeton basketball captain. He played both baseball and basketball there. He is now a Columbus architect.

★

A lost ball cost Dow Finsterwald, the 19-year old Athens sensation, the medalist honors. Finsterwald got lost on the sixth hole Monday, costing him two strokes. He ended the 36-hole qualifying round with 144 while Hager and Carmichael tied with 143.

★

The luck of the draw really played havoc with some men yesterday. Finsterwald and Roger Pedigo, only two Athens representatives in the entire tournament, play each other today.

Mansfield did little better as Carl Wiseman and Bob Carpenter are to battle over the first round. The winner goes against Al Hager tomorrow afternoon, providing, of course, Hager wins today. Pete Thoma, if he wins today and tomorrow morning will then meet Dale Rose. Only Gene Zediker and Arnie Adams are safe from their home-town competitors for the first few rounds.

Tribesmen Oppose Bucs In Exhibition

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Scattered to the winds for a couple of days, members of the world champion Cleveland Indians are home again to play an exhibition contest tonight.

Opposing the well-traveled Indians are Pittsburgh's bustling Pirates led by currently jovial Billy Meyer. The Bucs have won eight out of ten and were riding an eight game winning streak until the Chicago Cubs knocked them over in a twin bill Sunday.

Back from Brooklyn is Tribe Boss Lou Boudreau and his retinue of coaches, players, and batting practice personnel that performed so well in yesterday's all-star classic. Also ready for more major league baseball are the team members who played in an exhibition against Dayton Monday.

For the second year in a row, Bob Lemon and Jim Hegan failed to appear in an all-star game. Boudreau indicated Lemon had a "twinge" in his shoulder that made keeping him on the sidelines advisable.

The other players, Joe Gordon, Larry Doby, and Dale Mitchell, performed like all-stars from way back. Gordon was the veteran all-star from the Cleveland camp, having been selected for eight previous games.

The Flash handled six chances without a boot after relieving Chicago's Cass Michaels at the keystone sack. He also hit a double and scored a run.

Mitchell and Doby performed in their first interleague classic. Mitchell batted 1.000 with a double for his one turn at bat, but Doby went hitless in his single try.

CASEY TO START

Hugh Casey, famed fireman for the Brooklyn Dodgers before going to Pittsburgh, is scheduled to start for the Bucs tonight. Ray Poat, a former Indian, also is slated to appear.

Don Black, semi-retired Indian hurler, will hurl one inning for the Tribe. Black, who suffered an internal head injury during a game with the St. Louis Browns last September, has been on the inactive list since his illness.

Proceeds from the game will go to the Community Fund.

A long ball hitting contest will precede the game. Ralph Kiner and Dino Restelli, Pirate sluggers, will compete against Joe Gordon and Larry Doby of the Indians.

Hank Greenberg, Indians vice president, also might pound out a few long ones and Tribe Prexy Bill Veeck was listed as a possible pitcher for the sluggers.

Galion Hurler Tosses No-Hit Tilt At Shelby

SHELBY — Gene Pritchard pitched a no-hitter for the Galion Legion Juniors yesterday as they defeated the Shelby Legion Juniors 6 to 0 on the Shelby high school diamond.

The win placed Galion in first place in the league with three wins and no losses and knocked the Shelby nine out of a first place tie. Up to yesterday's game both Galion and Shelby had won two game in league com- from the game.

Besides pitching his no hitter Pritchard had 18 strike-outs to his credit and also drove in two of Galions runs.

Johnny McHugh, Shelby's shortstop was the fielding star of the games.

Swanger, Shelby pitcher, went out in the forth with a broken bone in his right hand.

The game was called in the 9th on account of darkness.

The Shelby Legion Juniors next game will be with Crestline Sunday as a preliminary to the Shelby Blues-Galion game at the high school diamond.

American Leaguers 'Smash 'Sorry' Nationals

Five Errors Mar Play In 16th Tilt

By LEO H. PETERSEN, United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK —(UP)— If the major league club owners are looking for an excuse to abandon the annual all-star game, as is often reported—they had their chance to do it today.

For in the sorry sunset of the American league's 11-to-7 victory over the National league at Brooklyn in what was easily the worst of the 16 mid-season classics ever played, there were very definite excuses for cutting the whole thing out.

This might be a handy stopping point because the game which got its start as a sort of added attraction to the 1933 Chicago World's Fair, now has completed its cycle of major league parks—a cycle which permitted all the fans in big league territory to see their chosen stars in action.

In addition to that, the last of the 16 games was something that reflected no credit upon the players who were supposed to be the best in the business. The National leaguers fumbled as if in a rank sandlot game.

Never before has a team committed as many errors in a single all-star game—the previous high of four bobbles being set by the American league at Cincinnati in 1938.

Some of the players themselves didn't seem interested enough to hustle, although the old pros like Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, and Jackie Robinson gave their all—all the way. But what bothered them and the rest of the nifty fifty—25 players on each side who are chosen for the game—was that even the fans were a little bored.

When it rained briefly in the sixth inning, many of the 32,577 fans who ducked for shelter found their dry quarters more pleasant than the seats they had paid up to $5 to park in and they didn't come back.

PAIR OF HOMERS

It was true that the American league deserved to win, as it has done 12 out of 16 times in this mid-season interlude. The National league had the two best hits of the day, the towering two-run homers by Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals and Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The National league also had some very fine pitching by Rookie Don Newcombe of the Dodgers and by Relief Hurler Ewell Blackwell of the Cincinnati Reds.

But beyond that the Nationals' fielding was slip-shod. Two errors in the first inning set up four unearned American runs and that was the winning margin. It started when Third Baseman Eddie Kazak of the St. Louis Cardinals threw inefficiently but in such a way that a top first baseman could have handled the ball. Johnny Mize of New York bobbled the ball and the Americans were on their way—teeing off on Warren Spahn's pitches.

But what the National leaguers wondered most about as each ball bounced crazily—and as each of its players disported himself as well as he was able—was whether the National league would ever win another game.

The gloomy National leaguers now have suffered four straight defeats in the all-star game and two straight world series losses

In their dressing room the men led by Billy Southworth of the Boston Braves did most of their griping about the two-run single swatted by Eddie Joost of the Philadelphia Athletics in the fourth inning. Joost hit the ball off the end of his bat and lined it down the first base line. First baseman Gil Hodges moved towards the line to make the stop but, just in front of him, the ball bounded crazily away and into right field.

Even Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians and the American league called it a "screwy hit" and said it was the break of the game.

That's what the National leaguers were saying over and over again while they muttered about "wait 'til next year."

But this time there was just the chance there wouldn't be a "next year."

"Boy! My head feels THIS big this morning!"

All-Star Game Notes

By BILL CORUM

NEW YORK — (INS) — Reminder jotted on all All-Star game scorecard — don't keep this!

★

The game was so bad, Chicago has invited Ezzard Charles and Joe Walcott to come back and fight every week.

★

Charles was present and after watching "our man" Pee Wee Reese box the ball, he was said to have opined "That boy looks like he'd make a pretty good welterweight."

★

This was the first All-Star game ever played at Ebbets Field. It took seventeen years for it to get this bad.

★

It would appear that poor Ford Frick has only one chance left. He can file a demurrer against this All-Star affair being confined strictly to baseball and challenge Harridge to a curling match.

By JOHN BARRINGTON

NEW YORK — (INS) — Ted Williams, something of a connoiseur of good pitching, rates Brooklyn's freshman ace, Don Newcombe, as fast as the Trucks, Fellers and Newhausers of his own league.

The American league batting champion said in the dressing room after the 16th annual All-Star game at Ebbets Field.

"Newcombe's pitching impressed me more than anything else today. He really rears back and throws that fast one in there. He looks fast, and, brother, he is."

Asked to make a comparison, Williams said:

"Of course, I only batted against him once, but he seemed as fast as Feller or Trucks or Newhauser, or any of the speed artists in our league."

"He can hit 'em too," Williams added with a grin, recalling his backhanded running catch of a Newcombe drive to left field in the third inning. That catch was one of the picture plays of the game.

Beveridge Team Back In Top Spot

Marge and Gene Beveridge won two games in the Tuesday night Mixed doubles league at Richland Recreation last night to go back into first place.

Gene and Lola Rudolph, however, posted the best scores of the night, a 1,037 total. Gene posted a 171-194-171—536 and Lola a 186-125-190—501.

Tennis Entries

Entry blanks for the annual News-Journal city tennis tournament will appear in the N-J starting July 31. Entry deadline is Aug. 10. The tournament runs Aug. 13 to 21 on the Woodland courts.

Retains Faith In Democracy

Girls' State Governor Tells Own Story

By JOAN RANKIN

CINCINNATI — (INS)— I had an idea, even before my election as governor of Buckeye Girls' State, that I would not be sent to Washington as an Ohio delegate.

This information came to me before the state election at Columbus from other girls assembled at this conclave to put into practice the basic governmental principles of this nation.

This information was quite discouraging but I felt that perhaps some solution might be reached before the national meeting.

When I was officially informed by a director of girls' state that I would not be selected to represent my home state in the national meeting, I wondered why.

At that time, the only reason given was that I wouldn't be allowed on the campus of the American university and that I would find it difficult to obtain housing accommodations in Washington.

I was keenly disappointed, despite the fact that I had some unofficial and previous warning of the situation. My election had been only a temporary stimulation, it seemed, but a real expression of democracy within the Girls' State. This seemed particularly significant to me because of the 422 Ohio girls represented only eight were colored. I was one of the eight. Yet I had received 309 votes.

For the time being I tried to forget about the girls' nation convention, and the trip to Washington. It appeared to be hopeless . . . only a dream.

My election as state governor was such an honor that I was content for the moment to reminisce rather than look ahead, particularly for any controversy.

My only regret was the fact that the adult group at Girls' State failed to share the opinion of the girls themselves. It was a feeling which could not be completely banished from my mind.

However, I had no idea that public opinion would become so strong in my favor. Editorials and expressions of support from Ohio and other places began to appear in the newspapers.

I received many letters from the girls who had attended girls' state with me to let me know that they were disappointed in a decision of the elders not to back their choice. They, and I, feel that the principles of Girls' State should be upheld.

My confidence in the American people has not been damaged because of this current controversy. I maintain a fond hope that the Democratic system that put me on the brink of this wonderful opportunity shall not perish because of the confused opinion of a few.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DODGE and PLYMOUTH
DODGE "Job-Rated" TRUCKS

MANSFIELD is a Good City. The residents of Mansfield are Good People. We have enjoyed Growing and Progressing in a city like this since 1919.

At that time we started in an inconspicious way, with an automobile that we considered the BEST—the DODGE. Today we still believe it is best. As this car has improved—and grown, we have kept pace by growing with it—expanding to larger quarters, building, and remodeling until today we have an Entire Block at Your Service.

A Service Department that is unexcelled with up-to-date scientific equipment, a Body and Paint Shop that can handle any job up to Tractors and Trailers. A COMPLETE Parts Dept. that expedites the repairs on your car. And our latest expansion was acquiring a Huge USED CAR LOT. MANSFIELD, we wish to thank YOU for the faith you have shown in us.

YOUR FUTURE AND OURS

A town devoted to its own progress, constructive growth—business men building, remodeling, expanding, re-investing in their own future, giving you better service, at less expense, because your support made possible better service.

Yes, your support made possible our Parts Department, pictured above, in 1945. It made possible our new Used Car lot, 42 W. Second St., in 1948, and it made possible the recent installation of our new, modern Alemite Lubritorium in the Service Department.

We're Grateful For That Support Mansfield, and We Will Continue to Give You Better Service at Less Expense

BURIED SAFE—John Gerhart, 106 Pleasant avenue, looks over the safe that was uncovered yesterday on the site of the new News-Journal building at the northwest corner of West Fourth and Mulberry streets. Gerhart buried it on the site ten years ago, after carefully emptying it of all its contents. The safe caused much interesting speculation among the excavators and spectators before Gerhart identified it.

Two Youths Held On Slaying Charge

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Two youngsters, 11 and 14, have been turned over to the Franklin county domestic relations court yesterday to face charges in the slaying of their sister-in-law.

Post-War Boom Adds 20 Industries

Expansion Brings City New Plants

Output Includes Variety of Products

By MARGUERITE MILLER

A post-war industrial expansion and building boom has brought Mansfield more than 20 new industries and an estimated two dozen new products

Since 1945 the city's industrial population has expanded to 79 plants, large and small Products from several of the plants are sold throughout the world where branch offices have been established.

Expansion of existing manufacturing plants since the war has cost the industries more than $10,000,000. Lion's share of the cost was the more than $7,000,000 program at Westinghouse where an all-steel and glass storage shed and a three-level building were constructed in addition to inside plant remodeling.

However, of all local plants, Mansfield Tire and Rubber company has shown the most expansion Only recently company officials announced the consolidation of the tire and tube manufacturing facilities of the Pennsylvania Rubber company of Jeanette, Pa. with those of the local plant The consolidation was the first major post-war industrial development in the city.

The merger also is expected to bring employment in the local tire plant to levels approaching war-time peaks

In addition to the consolidation, Mansfield Tire's previous $2,000,000 program included the leasing of the Hughes-Keenan plant, purchase of the No. 2 Columbia plant on West Sixth street and a new warehouse on the main plant location on Newman street.

Mansfield Tire also has led the city manufacturers in bringing two of the newest products to market One is the new type of synthetic rubber, called "cold" rubber or "Ultipara" Tested to give 20 per cent more wear than natural ubber tires, the new product was developed at the Copolymer corporation in Baton Rouge, La.

ADDS PLASTIC LINE

A month ago, the tire company also announced plastics production had been added to the products turned out at the plant The new product is Vinyl Film, a sheet plastic used in the manufacture of shower curtains, kitchen curtains, drapes, raincoats aprons, and scores of other items. The operations here are confined to the production of the film and sheeting only.

At a later date, the company announced, production is expected to begin of a plastic leatherette, such as used for pocketbooks, shoes, upholstering and other products

At Ideal Electric and Manufacturing company, progress within the plant has been toward design, engineering, manufacture, sales and industrial relations. Recently developed has been a new motor in sizes ranging from one to 125 horsepower. Experimentation is now underway on large size motors up to 1,000 horsepower.

Additions to the engineering staff, machinery and to the sales promotion staff have been made. Five new sales offices have been recently opened in Tampa, Fla.; Portland, Ore, Charlotte, N. C, St Paul, Minn, and in Tucson, Ariz Branch offices have now been established in 45 cities throughout this country and in 30 locations in foreign countries.

Other expansions in Mansfield industries have included. a $135,000 plant for the Independent Towel and Supply company, 641 Grant street; and purchase of the Burkhart lumber company at Alta by the Lane Lumber company.

ADDED TO ROSTER

According to Chamber of Commerce industrial records, 21 new firms have been added to the city's industrial roster since the end of the war New companies and their products are

Jim Burkhart and Sons, cement blocks, Hydrolock Manufacturing company, hydrolock connections; Kenny Steel Parts company, commercial ventilators, Maginnies Power Tool company, concrete vibrators and power tools, Mansfield Automatic Machine company rubber working machinery Mansfield Garment company ladeis coats, Mansfield Paint company, industrial finishes, Mansfield Screw Machine Products company, automatic screw machine parts; Mid west Fabricating company, pre-fabricated houses

'Devil Box' Aids Pilots

Ground Training Slashes Cost

NEW YORK — (UP) — Better pilots are being turned out at half the usual cost on a $25,000 electronic device called a Dehmel flight simulator. Capt Sam Miller, chief pilot of Pan American Airways Atlantic division, disclosed in reviewing his first six months' experience with the device.

Veteran pilots who ordinarily would have to spend ten and a half hours in the air to learn to fly the new double-deck $1,500,000 stratocruisers now spend less than five hours in actual flight. Twenty-eight pilots have come out of the devil box sweat-soaked but crash-proof.

The device with the built-in gremlins makes pilots experts in handling problems they are never likely to meet in years of actual flying

The simulator duplicates the cockpit of the double-decker in every detail and works so realistically that pilots forget they are not at the controls of an airplane Emergencies impossible to duplicate on an actual airplane without loss of the craft but routine on the simulator make the device the most valuable training instrument in air line operation, according to Capt. Miller

Since then they have built six single homes, two duplexes, a garage apartment and a shop.

"I guess we've lived in more new houses than anyone we know of," Boaz said

Panel Heat Plan Uses Radiation

Control Systems Offer Changes

By JOAN SCHWEITZ

The newest system of heating is called radiant panel heating. This system controls the heat within one to one and half degrees from the ceiling to the floor of a room.

The control systems are the biggest changes in heating systems. Instead of a thermostat controlling the heat a piece of wire is installed. Not only can the control be placed inside the house, as a thermostat is, but it can be placed outside the house, too, registering every degree of change.

This means that when the temperature drops suddenly your heater won't have to wait several hours to give the proper amount of warmth because with every degree drop outside, the inside control adjusts the heater.

New air conditioners filter and circulate the air, bring in fresh air and when adjusted, they can serve as circulating heaters. The new conditioners are more compact now, too. A three-ton unit can be concealed in a closet in a modern hotel suite. The unit distributes conditioned air to the bedroom and living room through a duct concealed in a wall.

In the future is the combination conductor and radiation heat. This will eliminate the radiator. It will come in two-100-feet-long sections and will allow the housewife to arrange her room as she wishes without having to deal with a radiator.

Convective heat is another new development accomplished with copper pipes and aluminum fins. The air comes out warm from a metal grill.

Young GI Kills Girl

EAST NASSAU, N. Y. — (UP) — The family of a girl killed by a corporal guarding a wrecked air force jet fighter said yesterday they hoped authorities "won't do anything to this poor soldier."

The father of the girl, Marion Anna Noreen, 25, of Brainard, N.Y., said he was convinced the shooting by Corporal Dallas H. Thompson, 24, of Westover Field, Mass., was an accident.

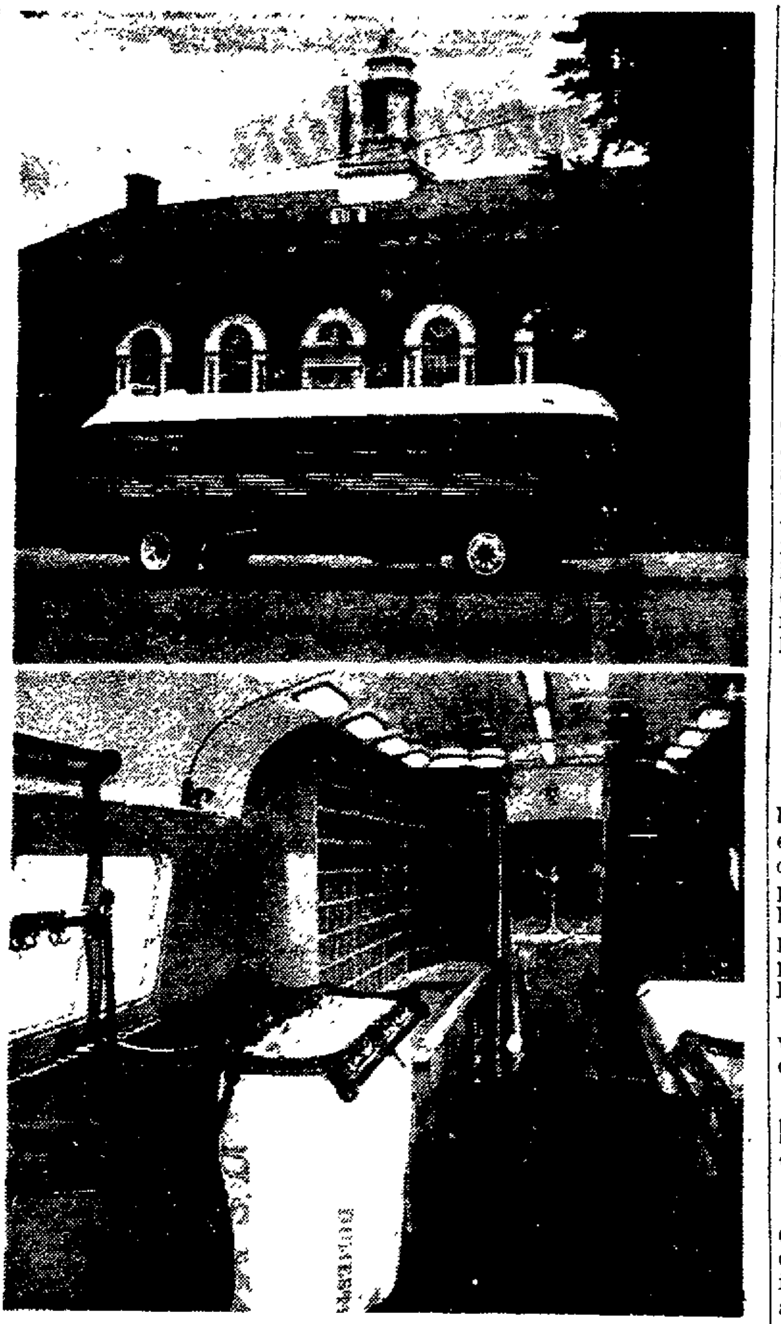
Miss Noreen was shot Monday night while walking in the vicinity of the wreck with her fiance, Walter Martin, 26, whom she was to marry in September, and his step-sister, Maud Shaw.

Thompson, one of three guards stationed around the wrecked plane, told police he heard the young people approaching and drew his .45 caliber automatic.

The voices, he said, was coming over a slight ridge, and as he climbed over to investigate he slipped and the gun discharged accidentally.

Miss Noreen screamed and fell to the ground. A bullet had struck her in the neck.

Corporal Thompson and Martin rushed the girl to the office of Dr. Nathan Schwartz, in East Nassau, where she died within a few minutes.



TRUCK POST OFFICE — A highway post office truck coach this week left the Flxible company's plant in Loudonville for Washington. It will join an experimental group of highway postal trucks as the government seeks a railway mail car substitute. Postal department officials inspected and accepted the Flxible coach Friday. The top photograph shows the exterior view while the lower picture gives an interior view. It has built-in equipment similar to a railroad mail car. In it, mail may be sorted for distribution by postal employes while making a scheduled highway run to areas lacking good railroad mail facilities. Painted in red, white and blue colors, the coach has screened windows and two locking side doors. The interior arrangements include a pigeon-hole mail compartment and sorting table, mail bag racks, a cooler for drinking water and a wash basin, plus storage space for mail bags and parcels in the rear. Because of its ample heating and cooling systems, and electric ceiling lights, the Post Office clerks can handle mail efficiently while traveling the highways despite any outside weather conditions. Power from an outside source supplies the electrical needs of the coach when it is standing for some length of time, as during mail loading and unloading. A battery and generator system takes care of lighting demands while the coach is moving down the road. At present, the United States Postal department is operating the majority of Highway Post Offices throughout the nation. But a few such units already are being operated by private contractors.

Unemployment Board Says Idle Man Must Seek Job

The Unemployment Compensation Board of Review at Columbus today ruled that an individual must make a "diligent and reasonable" effort to obtain employment on his own in order to be eligible to draw unemployment compensation.

The board's decision, issued with one of the three members dissenting, came in the case of a Cleveland man who had filed a claim upon being laid off after working as a carpenter for 42 years. The board's majority found the only effort the man had made to obtain a job involved his registering for employment at the carpenter's union hall.

The board said the man had not met the requirement of seeking work and therefore was not eligible for benefits.

In another ruling recently the board said an unemployed worker who meets the requirements of the Ohio Unemployment Compensation law is eligible to draw benefits even though his employer had not paid the unemployment tax for which he was legally liable.

The board's decision, again with one member dissenting, came in the case of another Cleveland man. He proved to the board's satisfaction that he had been employed by an employer subject to the Ohio law and had been laid off through no fault of his own. The employer contended he was not subject to the Ohio law.

The board decided the employer was liable for payment of the unemployment tax and his failure to pay such tax should not prevent the claimant from drawing unemployment benefits.

Huge Sturgeon Nabs Wrong Bait, Caught

LEWISTON, Ida.—(UP)— An eight-foot, 200-pound sturgeon got off on the wrong track and now is being converted into caviar and steak.

Sturgeon usually are found only in the Snake and Volga rivers. The huge fish was spotted by Vern Olmstead, Lewistown sportsman, while fishing from a bride on the Clearwater River. Olmstead and his son, Gerald, set out a line. The next morning they looked over the hook and found a very tired sturgeon which they landed with little trouble.

Judge Bares Vote Fraud

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(UP)—The defense called the first of its 34 witnesses yesterday as it began its efforts to tear down the case the government has built up against Edward F Prichard jr., and A. E. Funk jr., in the Bourbon county vote fraud trial.

The government rested its case at 4:04 p. m. yesterday after Circuit Judge William B. Ardery had told the federal court jury that Prichard sought his advice while admitting partial responsibility for the attempt to vote 254 fraudulent ballots in the general election last Nov. 2.

Judge Ardery, speaking slowly and deliberately in a hushed courtroom, testified that Prichard came to his home in Paris, Ky., last Nov. 7 and said he needed advice.

The judge then testified:

"Mr. Prichard told me that he and two other young men prepared the ballots here in question and put them in the ballot boxes before the election began.

Guard Installation Boosts Airport

By ROBERT SCHWEITZ

The most important thing that has happened to Mansfield's municipal airport since the close of World War II is the construction of the huge Air National Guard squadron project.

When the $1,000,000 construction project is completed Mansfield will have one of Ohio's "super-ports."

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held April 12 when Brig. Gen. Errol H. Zistel, commanding officer of the 55th Fighter Wing, turned the first earth.

The project includes a giant hangar and five other buildings. There will be a crash truck garage, a warehouse and administration building and other storage facilities. The installation will occupy 21 acres of airport property.

The latest development is the Civil Air Administration's proposal to put a control tower on top of the hangar. The first building expected to be completed is the warehouse. The contractors, Friebel and Hartman, Shelby, said it should be completed by August.

There also will be a $237,000 airplane parking apron for the squadron's F-51 planes.

The field now has two paved runways that measure 5,600 by 150 feet. At the end of each of these runways is a 1,000-foot sodded strip. The port covers 1200 acres. It was originally 189 acres and had no paved runways.

With the Trans-World Airlines making it a regular stop since 1947, the airport has an average of 13 passenger arrivals and departures per day. It services in a day 115 pounds of air mail, 326 pounds of air express and 454 pounds of air freight.

The $125,000 Sky Club restaurant which gives an unobstructed view of the entire field has a seating capacity of 350 persons.

With A. Clayton Tschantz as its manager, the airport had more than 40,000 flight operations last year. From its tanks 45,000 gallons of gasoline were consumed.

2,700 More Quit Docks

LONDON — (UP) — Dock strikers answered the state of emergency proclaimed by King George VI yesterday by calling out 2,700 more workers and tying up 15 more ships.

The state of emergency took effect last midnight, giving the government dictatorial powers to break the paralyzing wildcat strike.

The government's first move was expected to be the appointment of a port emergency committee of five to direct the movement, loading and unloading of all ships, barges and vehicles.

The committee may use the 15,000 non - striking dockers, troops and volunteers, but has not been empowered to conscript labor.

Military trucks rumbled through the streets of London's dockland — which helps feed 12,000,000 persons — and 2,300 soldiers began moving perishable cargoes this morning.

But the strike crisis seemed more serious than ever. The National Dock Labor board announced that the number of strikers had jumped overnight to 12,950, the highest since the walkout began 16 days ago.

Claims Trees Can Catch Measles

STAMFORD, Conn. —(UP)— Trees, like children, sometimes get the "measles" in spring and early summer.

"Their leaves blotch because a fungus gets under the 'skin'," Dr. Rush P. Marshall, director of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories, reported.

"The stains are first yellow, then reddish and brown. Often they cause the leaves to drop prematurely."

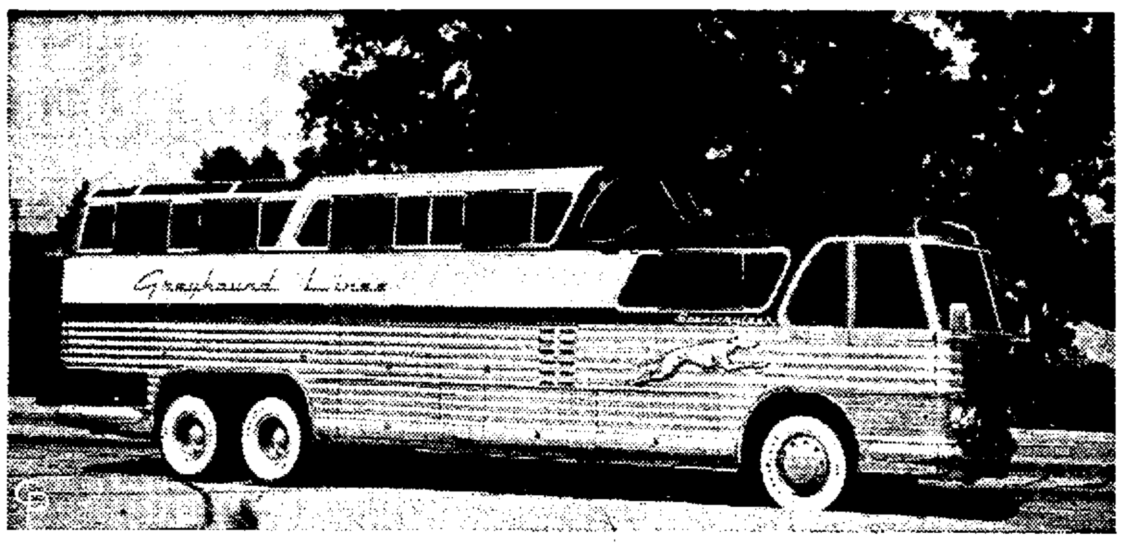
"Spraying will prevent the disease, but once the fungus penetrates the leaf the disease must run its course like measles in children," Marshall said.

Claims His Hat Is Truman's Luck

CLEVELAND —(UP)— Eddie Jacobson, once the business partner of President Truman, hopes that it may have been his hat that brought the President good luck on his campaign last year.

In Oklahoma, Jacobson said, the President admired a hat he was wearing. That's the last he saw of the hat, because Harry Truman wore it throughout the campaign (they have the same hat-size).

Jacobson, in Cleveland for a Bnai B'rith convention, is a staunch admirer of Harry Truman, whom he has known since 1916. Together they helped organize the Second Missouri Field Artillery, Battery D, went to France, and opened a business on their return.



SCENICRUISER—One of the most striking innovations in this new, 43-passenger sceni-cruiser bus is the raised dome provided to give passengers in rear seats an unobstructed view of the road ahead. The forward deck seats 10 passengers and 33 sit at the rear level. The new bus is 40 feet long and washroom and toilet facilities are available in the lower section.

Old Shell Plant Becomes Modern Industrial Building

A structure that had been a Mansfield landmark for the past 30 years has now been converted into a modern factory structure. This is the old shell plant of World War I.

The original structure was of unusual design with an inverted roof. The building was acquired by the Gorman-Rupp company three years ago, and will be used at present as a warehouse.

In the rebuilding process, the original foundations were used, and steel girders were converted for use in the new structure which is 128 feet wide by 400 feet long.

The structure provides a substantial addition to the present plant of Gorman-Rupp, and represents an expansion in Mansfield's industrial facilities.

Start 6,000 Mile Journey

SAN DIEGO —(UP)— Two San Diego cyclists, Mrs. Mary Trotter and her brother, Frank Williamson, are on a strenuous vacation consisting of a 6,000-mile transcontinental bicycle trip.

They left San Diego "to see the country in a leisurely way." Their cross-country sojurn is expected to take six months.

The first leg of their trip will take them to the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico, El Paso, Fort Worth and on to Florida. From Florida they will head their cycles for New York.

They will return west by way of Chicago, Colorado Springs, southern Utah and the Hoover Dam. They are carrying light camping equipment and expect to camp out whenever possible.

Caught Too Soon

NEWPORT, R. I. — (UP)— Joe Mello bemoaned his bad luck when he landed a 59-pound striped bass, believed the largest caught on rod and reel in New England waters for more than 10 years. Mello caught his record fish just three days before the $1,500 Newport-Jamestown fishing derby opened.

SPELLED WITH AN "S"

ST. LOUIS — (UP) — Chairman J. Harry Pohlman of the board of education's finance committee was a little hazy about the "three R's" of education at a committee meeting. "Every child in our school system," he said, "should have a thorough grounding in the three R's — reading, writing and spelling."

Indian Club Thieves Leave Doorless Car

NEW YORK — (UP) — American Indians have won an important victory in their fight against New Mexico and Arizona for discrimination against them, the Association on American Indian Affairs announced.

The two states finally have granted the Indians, about 10,000 in number, public assistance benefits under the federal social security act.

Oliver La Farge, president of the association, said that the victory "comes after 14 years of discrimination toward American citizens of Indian blood by these states since the enactment of the social security law."

Last January the association stepped up its fight against this discrimination with a petition to President Truman.

The news of the victory was confirmed in Washington by the social security administrator, Arthur Altmeyer.

"It is not a complete victory as the two states are being allowed to give less to the Indians than to members of other races," LaFarge said. "We still do not understand why the federal social security administration permits this illegal discrimination, as though the American Indians were only 85 per cent citizens."

The benefits from the law cover assistance to the needy, the aged, the blind, and dependent children.

PARENTS ACCUSED — Arraigned on charge of abandoning their 3-week-old paralyzed and internally malformed baby, Michael Zaccaro, 21, and his wife Mary, 19, are free on bail in New York till the case comes up July 15. They said they spent their last dollar to take the infant to Bellevue hospital. It was found on hospital stairs.

Bare Results Of Heat Test On Humans

MINNEAPOLIS — (UP) — Some humans have withstood temperatures of 240 degrees Fahrenheit for 25 minutes.

Two University of California engineers told the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers meeting at the University of Minnesota about some tests with student volunteers.

Craig Taylor and W. V. Blockley said they conducted the experiments to help solve practical problems of industrial psychology and hygiene. Kiln technicians, for instance, frequently are exposed to temperatures of 250 degrees for several minutes and sometimes to 500 degrees.

Here's Why

MANSFIELD FROSTED FOODS, Inc.

Can Reduce Your Food Bills

The rental of a frozen food locker at Mansfield Frosted Foods, Inc., provides several very definite advantages.

In the first place . . . over the course of a year . . . you'll make a considerable saving in your food bill. As every housewife knows, there is a great difference between the price of food when it is plentiful and when it is scarce. When you have a frozen food locker you can buy your food when the price is lowest. Your locker is literally filled with bargains all the time.

Secondly, you store your foods when they are at their best. Buy strawberries at the height of the season; gather in the produce of your garden when it is at its tastiest and then store it until you are ready. Frozen foods lose none of their flavor over long periods of time.

Finally, if you go in for hunting or fishing you can catch the game when it is in season and enjoy it months later. A frozen food locker is the answer to the hunter's and fisherman's prayer.

How the Foods Are Prepared For You

A frozen food locker at Mansfield Frosted Foods is far more efficient than any type of home freezer. When you buy meat, for instance, professional cutters cut it up as you direct and then wrap it in moisture vapor-proof paper. After that it is flash frozen in a temperature of 12 degrees below zero in a separate room. In such a manner is all of the flavor sealed in . . . and the food will keep for months in your locker where the cold is always absolutely constant.

One of the most unusual and biggest drawing spots along the road is Richland Recreation which was completed in 1947 at a cost of $200 000 Besides the restaurant which specializes in Chinese and American dishes, the air conditioned building contains a 12 lane bowling alley, a ball room and a cocktail lounge Its manager, H W Anderson, formerly a state highway patrol sergeant, has been guiding the business from its inception in 1946

There are other entertainment spots on the road There is George and Gladys Scott's "Scotty's" supper club Built about two years ago, the supper club has been a favorite spot of Mansfielders who are out for a night's entertainment as well as the evening meal.

One industry that has come to the road is the Morgan cleaning company The plant was erected in 1947 at a cost of $100,000 With the latest types of equipment, the company can clean everything from children's clothing to large rugs It has special building for its rug cleaning and for its dry cleaning Another building connected by a long hallway, is used for finishing the clothing

Across the road from the Catalina club is the trailer camp run by C D Sherrard The camp was started last summer and has been expanded this year There are five utility buildings with tile baths and modern washing machines for each trailer.

Although each family has its own bath and laundry four trailers use each building Forty three persons now live there but the 10 acre plot has sewage facilities to care for 500 persons There is a picnic area and outdoor fireplaces A playground is planned for the near future

The water comes from a soft water will and is described as unusually pure Only new trailers are permitted in the camp.

Perhaps the newest structure on the road is the "Hill-Top" drive-in which is scheduled to open in about two weeks

This building cost its owner, William Elias, more than $60,000 About 85 persons can be seated in its air-conditioned comfort There are several leather upholstered booths with stools along the counter All the kitchen and cooking equipment is in stainless steel The building is double insulated and has an acoustic ceiling

One of the buildings on Ashland road of which Mansfield is most proud is the Naval Reserve training center Completed in 1947 the $300,000 installation is as ship-shape as the Navy could make it Into a $100,000 triple quonset structure the Navy has put $200 000 worth of special electronics and shipboard equipment.

Military Government Comes To End

Western Germany Now Under Civilian Rule

BERLIN — Western Germany is bidding a fervent farewell to military government A new kind of rule under civilian high commissioners is coming into being

No one knows for sure at this point what the changeover will mean least of all the Germans

Civilian rule is an experiment, just as military government was But there are big differences.

In 1945 the prostrate German virtually welcomed military government He had none of his own Everything was chaos Trained to look to a superior for even his food he felt military government gave him what he wanted — a superior

Today the German has had four years in which to forget what his own government did to him and four years in which to think what the allied military governments were doing either for or to him He has developed a tendency to bellyache about what he has and wish to heaven he had something different

The new civilian high commission, therefore, is not taking office with any noticeable cheers from the German

Moreover, the new rule will be handled by men in mufti Some people think this is a psychological mistake unless the German has changed a lot He'll take from a general what he won't take from a civilian

The commission formally takes over in September after the western federal republic is created by a general election in the American, British and French zones

John J McCloy, former World bank president, is the American commissioner Andre Francois-Poncet ambassador to Berlin for ten years before the war, is the choice of France Sir Brian Robertson four-star general and military governor, will doff his uniform to represent Britain

It isn't just a question of each of the three moving into the chair of the military governor and saying "Let's go" or "Let's do this like they did"

The advent of the new republic requires a transition in power and responsibility.

The west-German has been given a constitution and also a bill of rights, in the form of an occupation statute The occupation powers reserve certain privileges

Mansfield to Use Clear Fork Water By June, '50

Project In Final Chapter

Huge Program Costs $2,450,000

By GAYLORD HAKE

Water from Clear Fork reservoir will be flowing into Mansfield homes by June of 1950.

This prediction was made by Carl Walker, chief engineer of Jennings-Lawrence, engineers for the city's $2,450,000 project.

Several questions about this new water arise in most discussions of the project.

How much will it cost? How about the temperature of the water from the reservoir?

And from the population—estimated at 10,000—on Mansfield's fringe," will we be able to get city water?"

Merchants ask if there will be enough water for their air conditioning units. Previously many drilled their own wells because the city's supply was limited. Industry wonders about the cost and availability of the water.

And those with an eye to the future ask "how is the project financed, and how are we going to pay off this $2,450,000 indebtedness?"

WATER WARMER

When the Clear Fork project goes into operation city water will be about eight degrees warmer in the summer than the well water now being used, Sanitary Engineer B. V. BeVier's report states. This temperature difference is figured on the basis of half well water and half reservoir water.

The well water in the summer has a temperature of 55 degrees. Reservoir water will be 70 degrees. Equal parts of well water and reservoir water, which will flow from Mansfielder's water faucets will be 63 degrees in the summer, or about eight degrees warmer than now in use, according to BeVier's report.

When the new system goes into operation there will be 15,000,000 million gallons of water available daily. Six million gallons a day is the present load. These figures disclose there will be plenty of water for new customers.

But, to reach these new customers water lines must be laid. Extending water lines is an expensive proposition, and this item is causing water department officials some concern.

Funds for the project were raised through three mortgage revenue bond issues totaling $2,300,000 and a $150,000 grant from the waterworks operating fund, City Auditor Paul J. Kelley reports.

This indebtedness will be paid off by 1972.

The type of bond issues levied means that if the city can't meet its financial obligations, private interests could take over the water department, Kelley said.

PAYMENTS HIGH

The indebtedness, which reached an annual payment of $192,339 in 1949, will gradually lower as the principal of the outstanding debt decreases with the years.

The big drop will take place in 1963, when the annual payment will be $52,357.50, as compared with the $161,312.50 of the [illegible] year.

The year 1962 will bring the final payment of the $1,200,000 second mortgage bond issue, which accounts for the drop in the annual payment, Kelley's report states.

Funds to meet this indebtedness, to extend the water mains, and to finance the operation of a larger water department, must be raised by the department itself.

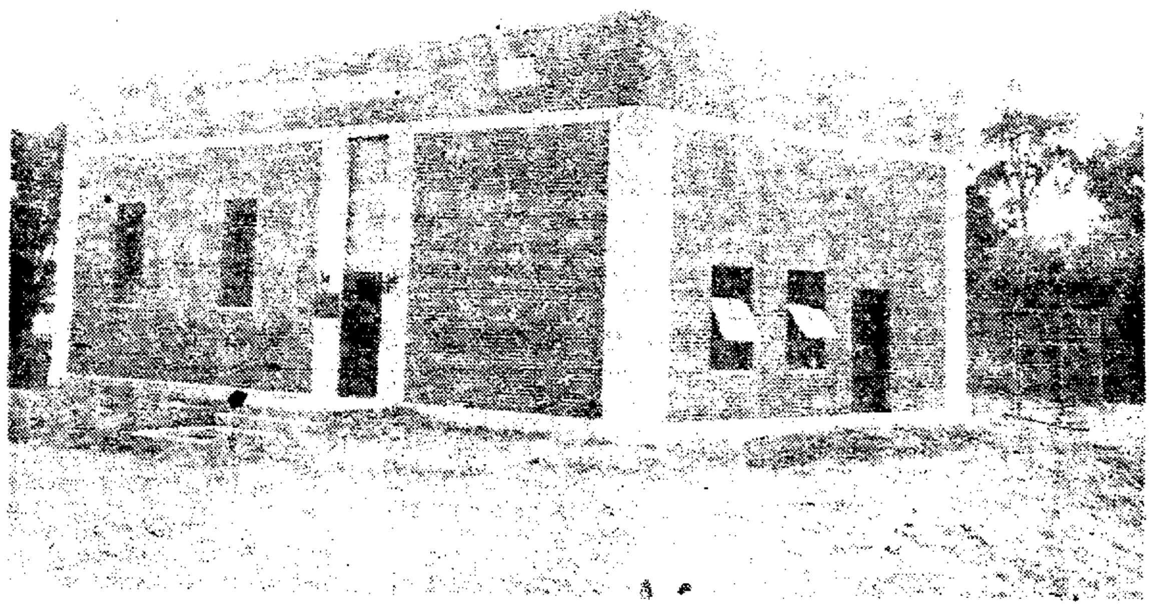
Other city branches don't have the necessary funds to subsidize the water department.

Two methods probably will be used to meet this increased financial obligation.

More water will be sold. The water rates will be boosted.

It was estimated by a Chamber of Commerce committee the water department will operate at a $100,000 loss this year.

VIEW AT CLEAR FORK — Part of the pumping instalation at Clear Fork reservoir is shown here. The new water supply is expected to take care of the city's expanding needs for many years.



15,000,000 GALLONS A DAY—Pumping capacity of the new pumping station located on Cook road at the Alta-Lexington road, is 15,000,000 gallons of water a day. One pump is now operating at the station, and two more will be added. This station will pump the water from the filtration plant to Woodland reservoir near the city. It is located one and a quarter miles from Clear Fork reservoir.

Romantic Atmosphere of the Old West Still Lingers In Southwest's Ranches

By NUGENT E. BROWN

(By Central Press)

CLAUDE, Tex. — Down here, in the big middle of the wheat belt of the southwest, many of the oldtime ranches still carry on.

The first big open range ever operated in this high plains area, the John Adair ranch, which produced 300,000 cattle in its first 11 years of history, from 1876 to 1887, still carries on and has never changed ownership from that day to this.

JA ranch headquarters were established in the picturesque Palo Duro canyon by the late pioneer, Charles Goodnight. The headquarters building is still on the same spot.

The only difference is that the acreage of the sprawling ranch has been reduced from the far-flung 1,335,000 acres in the 1880's to its present 330,000.

Today, the famous JA outfit grazes 25 to 30 thousand head of fine Hereford beef cattle. It was the first ranch in the southwest to change fom the native Longhorn to the Hereford breed.

Colonel Goodnight formed a partnership with John Adair, an Englishman, back in 1876, for operating of the new ranch in a wild open country, harassed by marauding bands of Indians and cattle thieves.

Adair furnished the money and Goodnight established the ranch. In fact, Goodnight, who lived until 1929 when he died at the age of 93, built a modern ranch.

This included 50 houses, large and small, hundreds of miles of roads, 20 or more large water tanks and as many corrals. Goodnight also strung hundreds of miles of wire fence, established a fine hay farm, built a commodious two - story headquarters of large logs.

Today, manager - owner Monte Ritchie, one of the direct heirs of the original owner, John Adair, spends some of his time at the big ranch every summer. He also is a native of England and spends his winters in Switzerland or the British isles.

Ritchie has a ranch superintendent, W. G. (Bill) Word, who was virtually reared there and has been with the outfit many years. Ritchie, who has a two-motored airplane, flies b ck and forth to Forth Worth, Kansas City and New York, spending most of his time in those cities.

However, this mighty ranch has much of the old atmosphere of the early days when Colonel Goodnight, a forceful leader, ran it with an iron hand and will.

The old chuck wagon, battered, beaten and worn, is still the mobile home of the JA cowboys from early spring until Thanksgiving. It is even now used seven days a week.

It is a vehicle loaded with the mellow connotations of an age. What tons of coffee have been stored in its spacious depths; how many hundreds of beeves have been swung from its wagon spokes; how many barrels of sourdough have been brewed between its sideboards!

When the ranch was started back in 1877 by Colonel Goodnight, who was the first manager, of course, his contract called for an annual salary of $2,500 a year plus one - third of the net profits after all operating expenses had been paid.

His contract was for five years. It ended in 1882. After repaying John Adair all money advanced with 10 per cent interest, they had a clear profit of $512,000. Not a bad income for those times.

Also of much interest as compared to present-day high priced cattle. Colonel Goodnight, in the early '80's, imported 60 registered Hereford bulls to start his new strain of beef cattle.

Those 60 animals cost him $27,000, according to J. Evetts Haley, author of a biography on Goodnight. Haley points out, further, that the ranch after a few years had 2,000 bulls valued at $150,000.

The old mess-house on this ranch is a very large and commodious structure. Near it is a dairy, with all of its modern quickfreeze equipment, where butter is stored in summer in sufficient quantity to last throughout the year.

A short distance away is the poultry yard and houses where the best breeds of fowl are kept and raised. Eggs are supplied by the gross for the residents of the headquarters village. There also is a large garage and blacksmith shop where wagons are mended and horses are shod.

The headquarters ranch home and office and village is about 30 miles from Claude, the nearest town, and about 60 miles by road from Amarillo.

High Store Costs Hint Merger Wave

NEW YORK — (AP) — Increasing business costs raise the prospect of a new wave of mergers and consolidations among department stores and specialty shops.

The insistent consumer demand for lower prices is being met with competitive cost cutting that many retailers claim has reached a practical limit

A remaining major economy step is consolidation of two or more independent retailers or merger with one of the large department store groups.

The immediate post-war years saw the peak of mergers with the initiative coming from large corporations who seized the opportunity to use their profits to advantage in expansion.

But today the profit curve is turning downward, and expansion programs are being cut to that size. There is a consequent lull in merger plans.

With lagging sales, however, independent stores are expected to seek out opportunities to join forces with other independents or with chains in order to bolster their position and insure against the effects of a recession.

In addition, many independents currently are seeking wider buying contacts either cooperatively with other stores or through buying syndicates operating on a nationwide scale.

Bigness carries considerable protection in retailing against adverse economic forces. Lower prices or greater discounts can be obtained from manufacturers and distributors on quantity orders. Special deals can be made to buy the entire output of some factories at favorable prices. Large scale financing is easier and cheaper. Better executive talent can be obtained at high salaries. Heavier advertising outlays can be made at a smaller ratio to sales. Private brands can be promoted.

All of the advantages, however, are not on the side of bigness nor on the side of chains or groups of stores. A small and aggressive independent retailer often can make a greater profit and be of greater service in his community than a large store.

Two outstanding examples of fine independent retailers are the J. L. Hudson company of Detroit and Marshall Field of Chicago. And there are others. Although no figures are made public, Hudson is credited in the trade with having the largest sales of any store in the nation.

But gross sales are dominated by the department store groups The National Retail Dry Goods association shows that 375 department stores and specialty shops in the above 1.000 00 class had sales last year of $4,121,000,000. Included were ten store groups in the above $100,000,000 sales class with total sales of more than $2,587,000,000.

There is no indication that these groups are "gobbling up" the independent retailer. Their expansion plans were made during the war and carried out for the most part in the 1945-48 period. A number opened new suburban branches in 1948-49.

A recent survey by Social Research Inc. of Chicago said a main reason for selling was the failure of owner-managed stores to develop executives capable of running the store when the owner is ill or dies.

Retail executives pointed to several other reasons: present high taxes are too difficult to meet, the prospect of death duties when the owner dies, the cost of independent expansion of sales territories, the cost of developing new products or redesigning old ones, failure to adopt new sales techniques being pushed vigorously by competitors

One retailer commented: "family owned stores let themselves run down then the family tires out and refuses to progress Too many owners, as they grow older, let themselves be gripped by pessimism about the future of the world in general and business in particular. They just give up."

Television's Hard Field For Actors

NEW YORK —(AP) — Television is a field as hard for aspiring actors to crack as movies, then radio, once were.

But young hopefuls are being drawn toward television in ever increasing numbers, flocking to New York and Hollywood with lean purses, determination and dreams of swimming pools and convertibles.

What is the advice of the people who know? It's the same old, unheeded advice that has been handed out before: if you've any common sense, don't try it. Your chances are slim to make the TV grade; extremely good to wind up elsewhere trying to eke out a minimum existence.

But if you are determined, don't storm television portals. Get into stock, little theater or learn your performing ABCs somehow. And remember, if you plan to go to acting school, none of them can guarantee you a job in front of the television cameras, even if you graduate summa cum laude.

'Flamin' Mamie' Still Smirks

Australian Salvages Plane Insignia

LAE, New Guinea — (UP) — The red hair of "Flamin' Mamie" is fading in the blistering sun of Nadzab air base, but she still smirks over her 103 raids against the Japanese

Kunai grass pokes through bullet holes in the brassiere of "Mary Jo."

A gorgeous nude called "Wishful Thinkin" still carries a bottle of beer against a background of San Francisco's Golden Gate bridge.

These forgotten glamor gals of the "wild blue yonder" are part of a unique collection of GI art salvaged by an Australian, Eric Snook, from some 800 junked Liberators, Mitchells and other aircraft

Snook either will sell the insignia to any air crewmen who want them or will donate the collection to U. S. veterans organizations in Washington, he told Olaf Ruhen, Sydney Sunday Sun reporter

"I'll take photos of them, anyway, and send over the photos," he said.

He can be reached by cable or letter addressed Eric Snook, Nadzab Airfield, Lae, New Guinea.

Snook is cutting up the planes and melting down the metal in four smelters.

He got the idea of keeping the insignia, together with such data as service record, number of raids, names of air crewmen, etc, when many New Guinea tourists spent hours browsing through the aerial graveyard.

Snook was a lieutenant commanding a group of Australians which joined up with the 503rd U S Parachute Regiment when it jumped to the capture of the Markham Valley and the Nadzab airdrome.

"The plaques are faded by the tropic sun and three years abandonment," Ruhen told the United Press, "but they are clearly visible and well-defined even from a distance."

Ruhen said Americans in some instances have spoiled plaques by stripping away as souvenirs painted Japanese flags which represented air victories.

"The best piece of work on the field is the nose of 'American Beauty,' a Liberator which made 11 mining excursions," Ruhen said

"It consists of a well-drawn nude whose knee is the nose of a tophatted Uncle Sam surrounded by a circle of stars. Even without crew associations, it would fill an honored spot in some ex-serviceman's hall.

" 'Mallet Head's' insigne is not especially beautiful, but she claimed two Japanese ships and eight fighters.

"Pilot K. A. LaBarre and Crew Chief Sgt. W. G. Hagedon had their names on the Boston 'Roaring Twenties,' and Pilot J Field and Crew Chief Sgt J. Gaucier were similarly associated with 'Paddy the Link.'

"Pappy Gunn and Danny Queen put their names on a Mitchell Capt. Pinky Wilson signed his plane 'Little Brat,' with a seductive little mermaid sporting on the fuselage.

" 'About Average,' another Liberator, has a finely-drawn Eagle dropping bombs and records 62 raids.

"Then there are 'Sooper Drooper,' 'Lazy Lady' and 'Queen of the Angels,' who has suffered from revolver bullets. 'Tyrannosaurus Rex,' claimed seven enemy fighters, is to be seen with many Disney characters "

Mansfield Modernizing Its Elementary Schools

Projects Near Top In State

Program To Cost $4½ Millions

One of the largest building programs launched in any Ohio school system has been underway in Mansfield for the past year. The Mansfield board of education is in the midst of a four and a half million dollar construction program.

Already completed are the Rebecca Grubaugh addition and Roseland schools. The Grubaugh project was built at a cost of $210,420. Roseland school cost $364,150.

Under construction and expected to be completed next fall are West Fifth street school, costing $523,248, and Newman school, which will cost $403,471.

Ground has been broken for the new Brinkerhoff school, which will cost about $390,964, and work on the Hedges and Carpenter buildings is about to begin The Hedges addition will cost $390,964 An estimated cost of the new Carpenter school, which is to be a one-story, 13-room building, is $390,897

Three other buildings to be constructed are the Woodland and Bowman school additions and a new Prospect school. Contracts have not been let for these three Bids for Woodland school were all rejected as too high by the board of education several weeks ago The building will be re-designed and new bids advertised in an effort to lower the cost

SENIOR NOT OVERLOOKED

A field house, a cafeteria, and a new lighting system for Senior high school also are planned

The city school system will have 123 new elementary school classrooms when the big building project is completed

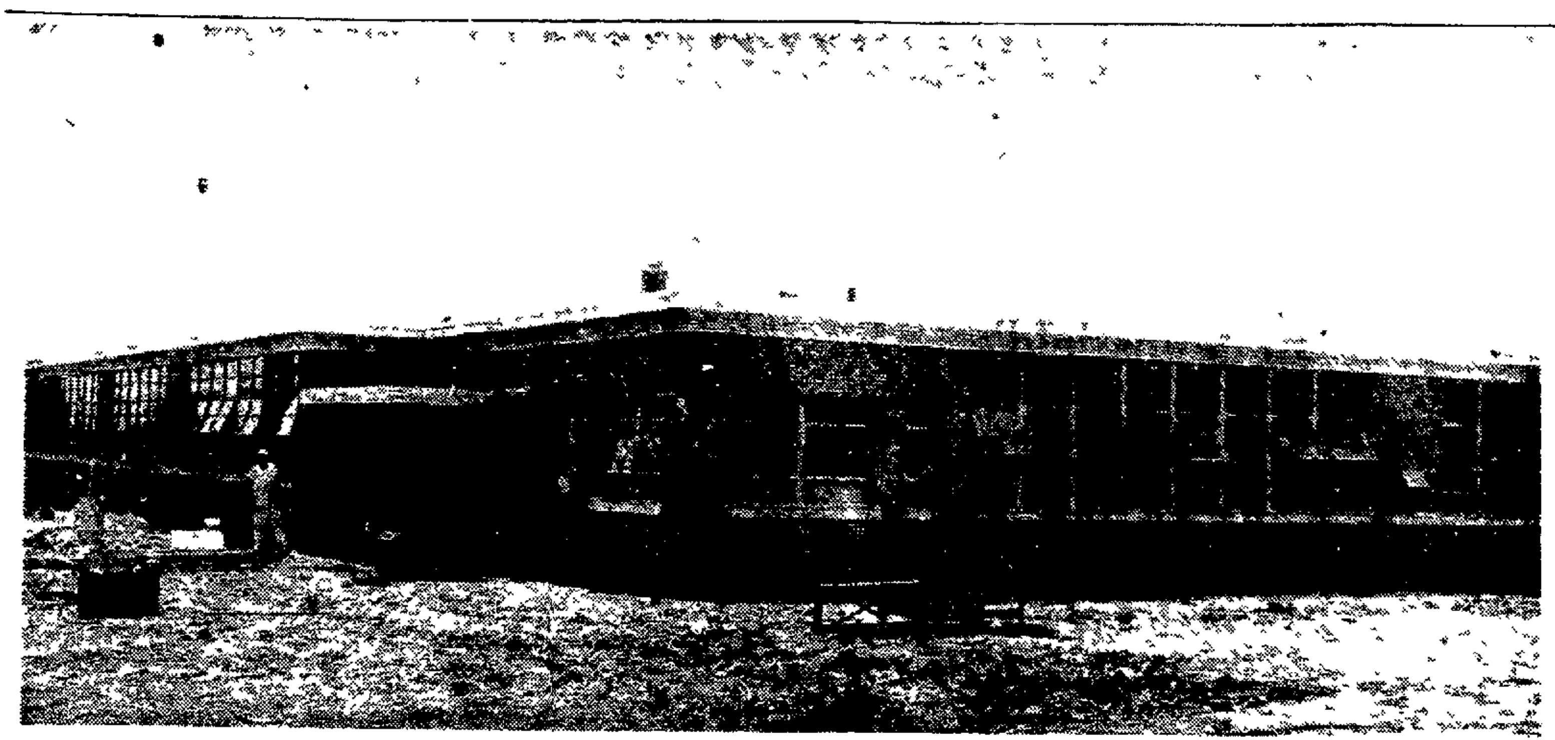
An estimate by John H Eisaman, school board clerk, lists the average cost per room between $30,000 and $35,000 Of the $4,416,578 available for the new buildings $2,547 656 has already been appropriated

The Roseland building on Wyandotte avenue near Trimble road was the first of the six new elementary schools to be built. It is on one floor and covers a frontage of 318 feet on Wyandotte.

The new Carpenter building will be erected on the Hartman property at Marion avenue and Carpenter road The new Brinkerhoff school will be erected at Highland, Arlington, and Euclid avenues It will replace the present building on Marion avenue Besides 13 classrooms, the school will have a combination auditorium-gymnasium

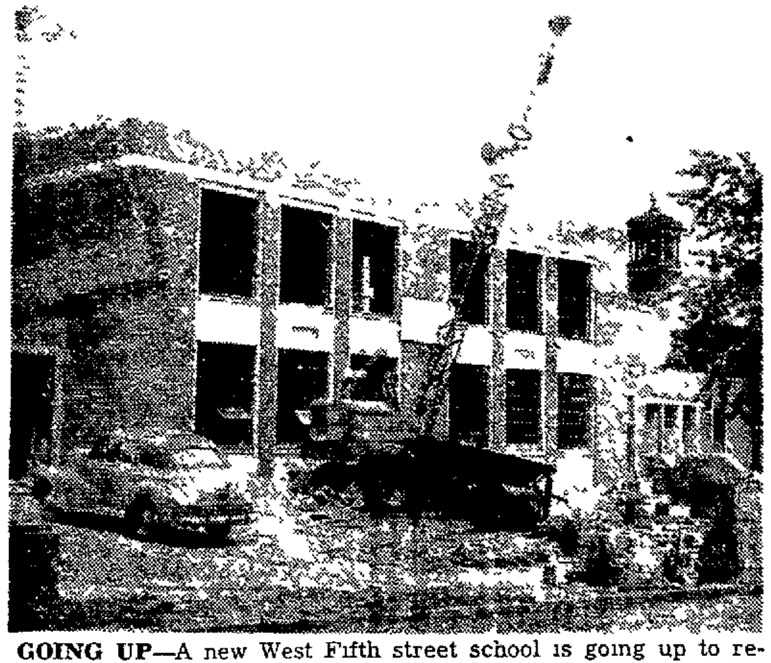
The Hedges and Woodland additions are to have 12 rooms each and combination auditorium-gymnasiums Part of the present Hedges building will be demolished to make way for the new construction

When the new school buildings are completed Mansfield will have six new or partly-new elementary buildings, a new field house, and a new cafeteria for Senior high school.

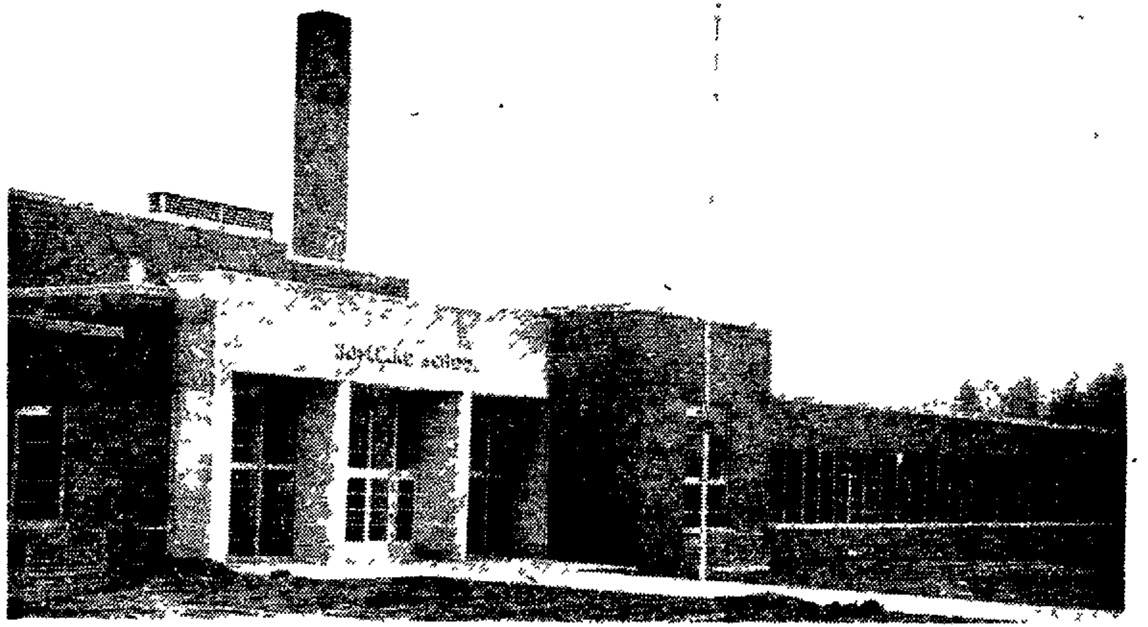


NEWMAN SCHOOL—This one story building, the new Newman school, was built in accordance with the most modern school building practices The 14-room structure cost $403,471 and is expected to be ready for use this fall

SCHOOL ADDITION—An addition to the Rebecca Grubaugh school on Western avenue has been completed at a cost of $210-420 Besides providing more classroom space, the project includes a gymnasium and auditorium This unit was the first completed under the city's big elementary school program Along with the expansion project, the school's name was changed from Western Avenue to honor Miss Rebecca Grubaugh, a popular teacher at the building



GOING UP—A new West Fifth street school is going up to replace the old overcrowded structure A part of the old building has been left standing to house children until the new school is ready



ROSELAND—One of the attractive and modern building in the Mansfield locality is the new Roseland school, situated in an expanding subdivision

Educator Urges Colleges To Offer More Modern Training

CHICAGO — (UP) — The new president of Rollins College. Winter Park, Fla, says that Laurence Olivier is "the best teacher of Shakespeare of our times"

He is Paul A Wagner, an industrial executive, who, at 31, will become the nation's youngest college president.

Wagner, educated at the University of Chicago, Yale and Harvard, puts special emphasis on the communication of ideas, in education as in business.

"Education must find a way to compete successfully with radio, television, and the movies in stimulating the student's interest," he said.

"Olivier communicates more and makes the average person more aware of what Snakespeare was trying to get across than many English teachers have succeeded in doing."

Wagner proposes that educational institutions fully utilize audio-visual methods in "putting the message across" to the students

City's 'Youngest' Growing Lustily

Attractive Homes Dot 'Boulevards'

Subdivision Now Part of Mansfield

Mansfield's youngest 'baby, South Boulevards, which the city annexed in 1948, is continuing the steady growth which has long characterized this attractive residential area

South Boulevards, a former subdivision that became a village before being annexed by Mansfield is regarded by out-of town realtors and visitors as one of the "nicest" Ohio communities in the middle-priced field Realtor J. H. Mayberry associated with the project, said he has often heard that comment

The project was begun in 1924 with the purchase of the Reid Carpenter farm. It was laid out in 444 lots, later replatted, making 475 lots. Sale of lots began in the fall of 1924.

There are nearly 300 houses there now, according to Harry Scoles, who was the last clerk for the village. He said that by the time the community became an incorporated village in May, 1939 there were 101 houses up

The section was incorporated in order to put in a sewer system The village purchased water from the city of Mansfield It has its own fire truck and also a police marshall.

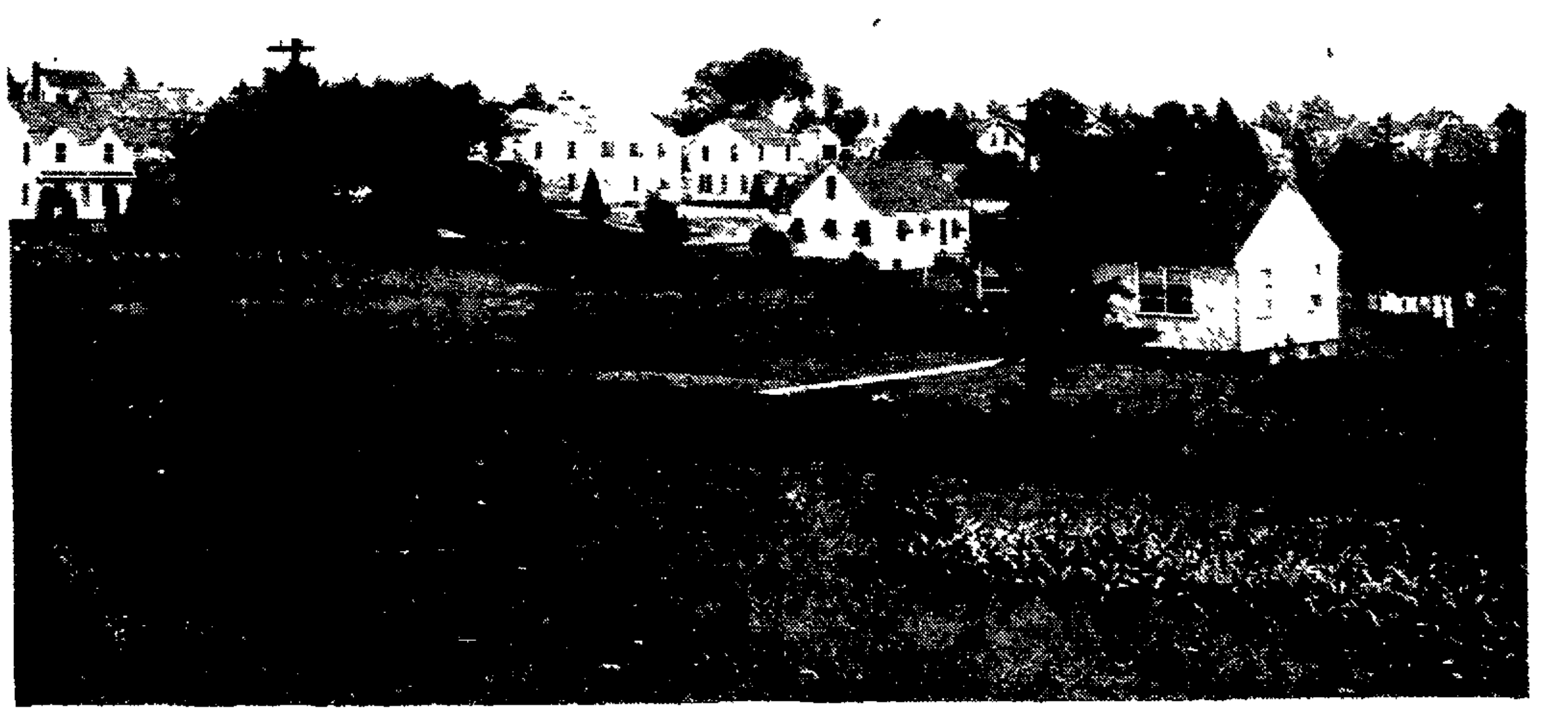
A town hall was built. The men, who started the project, put in a six-acre park in the village. Most of the houses contain six or seven rooms and there are a number of bungalows.

ANNEXED BY CITY

The village had its own ash and garbage collection and its own street repair department, said Harry E. Colbow, the last mayor. He worked himself out of a job in urging annexation of the village to the city. The village was annexed in September, 1948

In the twenties, Mayberry said the lots "went like hot cakes." During the depression years things slowed up. But during the war and after, things picked up again. The last lot was sold in May, 1947.

Those associated in the project put in streets, water, and gas lines and electric lines



TYPICAL—These neat homes are typical of the residences in South Boulevards This subdivision was begun in 1924 By 1939 there were 101 homes, and the section was incorporated as a village In 1948 Mansfield annexed the community There are now nearly 300 houses, with others a-building Nearly all of the residences are in the middle-price classification

ANOTHER VIEW—Many residences in South Boulevards are of brick construction, lending variety to the neat-looking residential section

Sharp-Eyed Store Sleuth Nabs Department Store 'Lifters

OMAHA, NEB — (UP) — A handsome, middle-aged woman prowls a large department store here like an inveterate bargain huntress

Her gentle fingers explore the texture of the goods, but her eyes never leave the customers around her She only pretends to buy She is the house detective

A soft-spoken woman with an infectious smile, she introduces herself only as Mrs Jones, for obvious reasons She is a tireless walker, never leaving the store. Her lunch often is interrupted by an urgent call for help

"There s no rest for the house detective," she said, "lost charge plates, lost children even lost husbands — they're all our responsibility"

Of course most of her trouble is caused by shoplifters, ranging in age from children whose parents teach them to steal to one 72-year-old woman They try to make off with anything they can, from small jewelry to pairs of shoes and even two - pants suits

Mrs Jones carries no means of protection She tries never to make an arrest in the store. Neither does she nab a suspect unless she herself has seen him take something.

"I ask them to come along quietly," she said, "and most of them do."

There are exceptions One man held her in a revolving door until she was rescued by a floor walker She caught another only by tripping him on the stairs and holding him by the leg until help arrived

She broke her wrist in one arrest "But I held onto my man" she smiled grimly "He got two years"

Mrs Jones admits that her work develops a very suspicious nature, but she insists it doesn't extend to her home life She has been married 31 years "and to one man," she said proudly

She has been in the business seven years and has had many unusual experiences But the strangest was that of the beautiful young woman who stole a $500 fur coat Mrs Jones caught her only to discover that "she" was a 26-year-old man who had been masquerading as a woman for years

Hits Federal Mine Action

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Rep Brehm (R Ohio) says he will try to head off federal mine inspection legislation which he contends would "invade states' rights"

He referred to a pending bill which would empower federal mine inspectors to close any mine where they deemed workmen were in 'imminent danger"

Federal mine inspectors told a House subcommittee Friday the Sterling mine in Ohio is an example of why they want such power

"I'll propose a compromise,' Brehm told a reporter yesterday "under which a federal inspector if he found a condition of imminent danger, could order workers to leave a mine until state inspectors could reach the scene Then the responsibility would rest with the state men.

France Has Big Problem In Algeria

North African Arabs Restless

ALGIERS —(AP) — France, with a large scale colonial war on her hands in Indo - China, is keeping a wary finger on the pulse of 20 million potentially turbulent Arabs in North Africa

President of the Republic Vincent Auriol himself hit the road as a kind of traveling salesman in a long tour up and down Algeria. From the Tunisian frontier in the east to the Moroccar frontier in the west he sought to persuade in a dozen speeches that continued attachment to France was the country s best investment in an uncertain future

Nothing was spared to impress the populace. Troops were marched past in all the major cities. American - built tanks and guns rumbled by in a cloud of blue smoke and dust. Fighter planes in neat formations roared above the jam-packed roofs.

Although the strongly nationalist UDMA (Independence Manifesto party) urged its members to boycott the celebrations few could stay away from such a show

But the president knew, as everyone else knew, that he had seen only one side of the picture He had lived here too long as a private citizen not to have known the back streets too And the back streets have not much changed since 1942

Soon after he landed from a cruiser Auriol was handed an "open" letter signed by Ferhat Abbas hot-eyed secretary general of the nationalist UDMA party It urged him not to forget "the hungry multitude while you are seated at table with the wicked rich"

"The least that we can say," this letter continued, "is that of all the men who will address you in the name of the Moslem population not one of them has been elected by universal suffrage They represent only themselves and the prefects who have chosen them"

Stern - faced Governor - General Maurice Edmond Naegelen retorted with angry contempt. 'Ferhat Abbas may claim he represents seven million Moslems but really he represents no one but himself."

The governor general was particularly indignant at the nationalist leader's charge that he faked the elections for Algeria's parliamentary assembly by packing it with selected Arabs

Algeria's assembly — a concession towards limited self-government made by the French a year ago — consists of two "colleges." One is composed of Europeans, the other by Arab members, in an equal proportion. It may discuss local measures and draw up its own budget, but all legislative questions have to be submitted to the governor-general or to Paris for approval

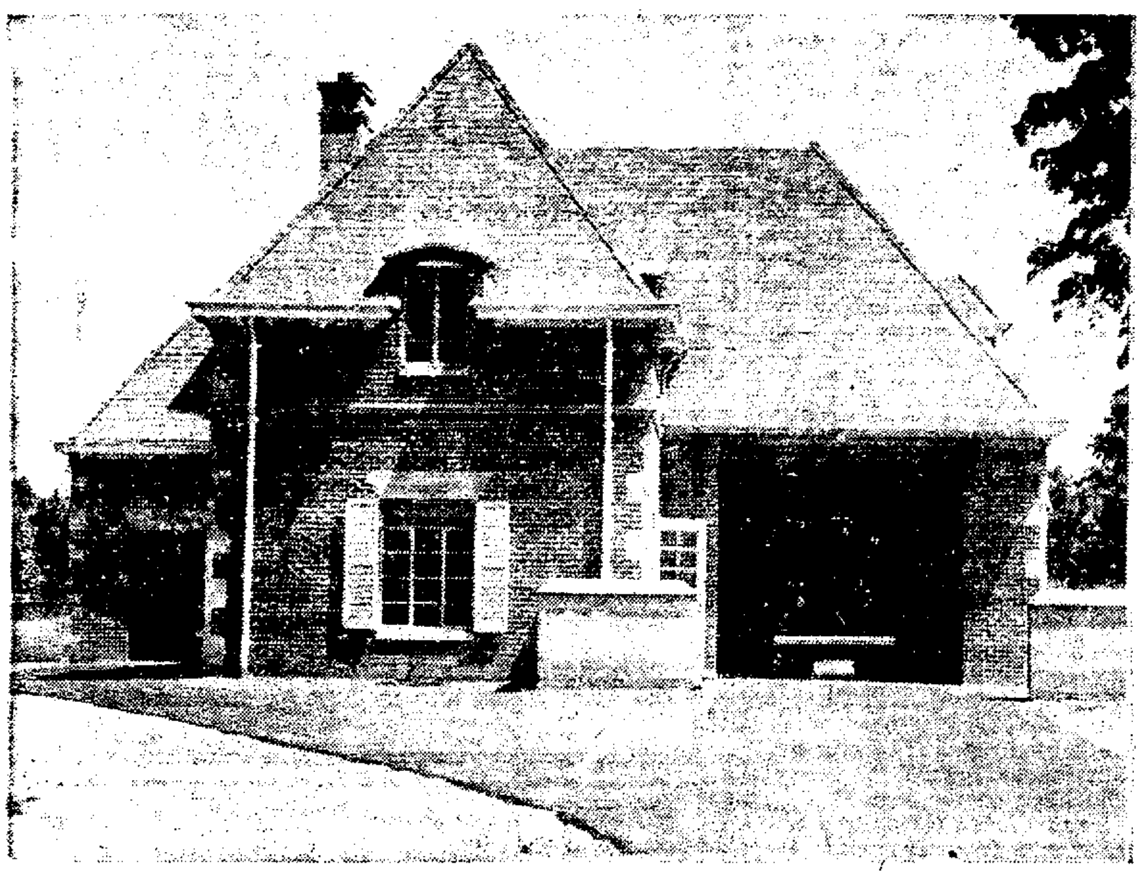
UNDER CONSTRUCTION—The new No. 4 station on Newman street will be ready for occupancy within the next 30 days, Fire Chief L. J. Steele said.



NUMBER 5 STATION—Completed in October of 1948, the No. 5 station was built at a cost of $52,093.30. It houses a pumper and two three-man crews.

Fire Department Keeps Pace With City

As the city of Mansfield grows, it has been necessary to enlarge the fire department to protect the city against the ever-present threat of destructive fires.

In enlarging the department, one new station has been requested by Fire Chief L. J. Steele.

A six-man crew moved into the new No. 5 station on Marion avenue, between Cline avenue and Woodhill road, in October, 1948.

The cost of the new station was estimated at $55,000 by Chief Steele.

City council authorized the construction of the No. 5 station in December, 1947, and appropriated $52,093.30 for its erection.

The six men, working in crews of three, man the 750-gallon Seagrave pumper housed at the station.

The No. 4 station under construction on Newman street is being erected at the site of a fire station that had been in use since 1911.

Council authorized $74,648 for the construction of the new two-engine station.

No. 4 station now is housed in temporary quarters at the Hughes-Keenan building, 621 Newman sctreet.

MOVING DAY NEARS

Firemen will move into the new station within the next 30 days, Chief Steele said.

Housed at the No. 4 station is a 750-gallon Mack pumper and a crew of six men, working in shifts of three.

To complete Mansfield's fire protection system Chief Steele has requested a No. 6 station to be erected in the vicinity of Harker and Springmill streets.

The chief lists a number of reasons why this new station is necessary.

"Many times long trains block the crossings at Bowman street, North Mulberry street, and North Main street. When this happens there is no fire department located north of the railroad that answers a fire alarm in that part of the city," Chief Steele said.

"Industry also has expanded in this section of the city in the past few years and it is necessary to have fire equipment located there in order to get to a fire alarm in a reasonable length of time," the chief explained.

Camp Plans Available

Miss Mabel Spray, Richland county home demonstration agent, announced today that women who are interested may inquire at her office in the court house about the women's camp to be held at Camp Pittenger beginning July 28.

The camp will last through the 30th. Any rural woman who wishes to go must contact Miss Spray before Monday.

The program at the camp will include crafts, etching aluminum trays, and other activities. The motto of the camp Miss Spray says, is "the homemaker, a better rural citizen." Richland county's quota is 20 women.

Research OK'd

SEATTLE — (UP) — The first large-scale study of what is happening to veterans who suffered mental disorders during the war is being conducted at the University of Washington medical school. To carry on the research, Dr. Herbert S. Ripley, head of the psychiatry department, has been given a grant by the Veterans Administration.

BIG MAN IN POLITICS

CHICOPEE, Mass. — (UP) — Alderman James Edward Mitchell thinks that maybe he's the biggest figure in American politics. He weighs 375 pounds and has a 5[illegible]-inch waist.

Kids Enjoy Fully-Paid Vacations

Taxpayers Foot Bill for Children

HARRISBURG, Pa. —(UP)— More than 2,500 boys are enjoying an all expense-paid vacation as guests of Pennsylvania. It is the state's first big experiment in providing summer camps for underprivileged children at the taxpayers' expense.

Carefully selected youngsters from all parts of the state are spending two weeks at the 65,000-acre Indiantown Gap military reservation with everything free, including their trans portation.

Gov. James H. Duff, who first conceived the project, then carefully nursed it through the 1949 legislature, said the primary purpose of the camp is to give children "who would ordinarily never get one, a real summer vacation."

This year the camp opens July 14. It will close July 28. In 1950, provided the present experiment is successful, 5,000 Pennsylvania boys and girls will be guests of the state at the reservation. The camp will last a month with boys attending the first fortnight and girls the second.

The authorities in charge of the unique project are leaving nothing undone to make it a full success. Everything was planned months in advance. The plans were carried into action immediately after the Pennsylvania legislature appropriated $600,000 for the experiment last spring.

The physical setting for the camp is among the best in the state, which boasts a wide variety in its scenic splendors. Indiantown Gap nestles in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains 22 miles from Harrisburg. During World War II, the Gap was one of the large staging areas for troops preparing for overseas duty.

The barracks where so many of the nation's soldiers spent their final nights in their homeland were scrubbed until they shone in preparation for the flood of youths.

Authorities in charge of the camp avoided any regimentation along military lines in the camp life. There'll be no drill of any kind for the boys—they won't even march in step when they go to and from reveille and retreat.

The officials at the camp have spared no effort to see that the physical, mental and spiritual needs of every boy receive proper attention.

Tour Called Off

WEYMOUTH, MASS. — (UP) — A few hours after Col. Earl Richart of the U. S. Army bought a 1949 automobile for a tour of the nation, his parked car slipped its brakes, rolled down a hill, plunged over a 25-foot embankment and was wrecked.

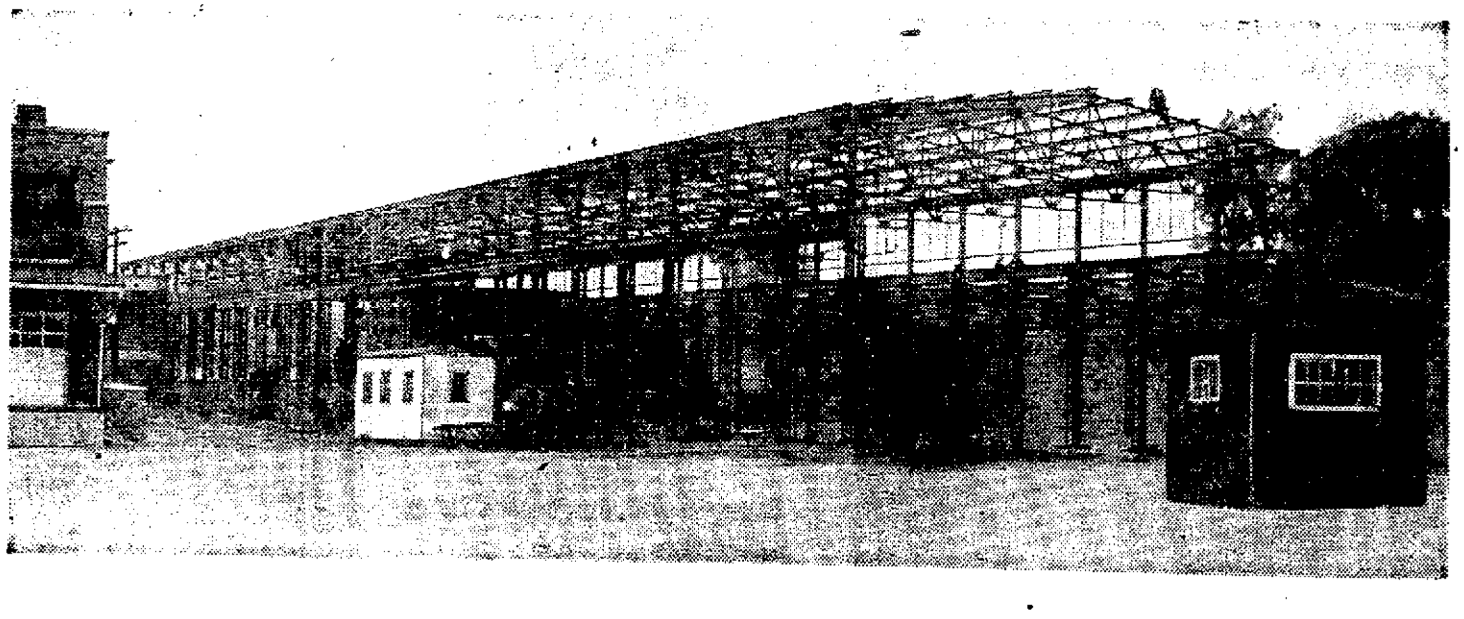
GORMAN-RUPP



This modern factory building has been erected on the site and with much of the original materials of the old shell plant of World War I. That structure had an unusual design with an inverted roof and had been a Mansfield landmark for the past 30 years. It became a part of our company property three years ago and had limited use as a warehouse.

In rebuilding, it has been possible to use the original foundations and to convert steel frame members. The new building is a monitor-type structure, 128 feet wide by 400 feet long. It is now under roof and the steel and glass windows that form the siding are being installed. In addition to being a much safer and more pleasant place to work, this building is of a practical and efficient design for our factory operations and storage. It represents a substantial addition to our present plant, achieved at a cost considerably less than required for all-new construction.

We think that this building is a worthwhile improvement among Mansfield's overall industrial facilities. We have confidence in the future of Mansfield and look forward to the time when our operations will require the full use of this building.

Spring Lake Vets Build Own Homes

Community Group Directs Affairs

Although real estate values have been soaring for the past several years, one Mansfield man has taken a step which has proved to be the answer to many war veterans' dreams.

By using the old American method of one dollar down and one dollar a week to sell them Sam Johnson has provided 100 lots, most measuring 50 by 150 feet, on the Ashland road. It is known as the Spring Lake allotment. Here 50 persons mainly war veterans, have purchased lots on the long-term agreement and are building homes.

The homes aren't the type shown in high class building manuals. Far from it. Instead, they are sturdy little structures, built mainly by hands more used to operating drill presses, handling wrenches or some other such work. No bids are let for these homes. They are built by the owner, from cellar to roof, and furnish a home with rent set at one dollar per week.

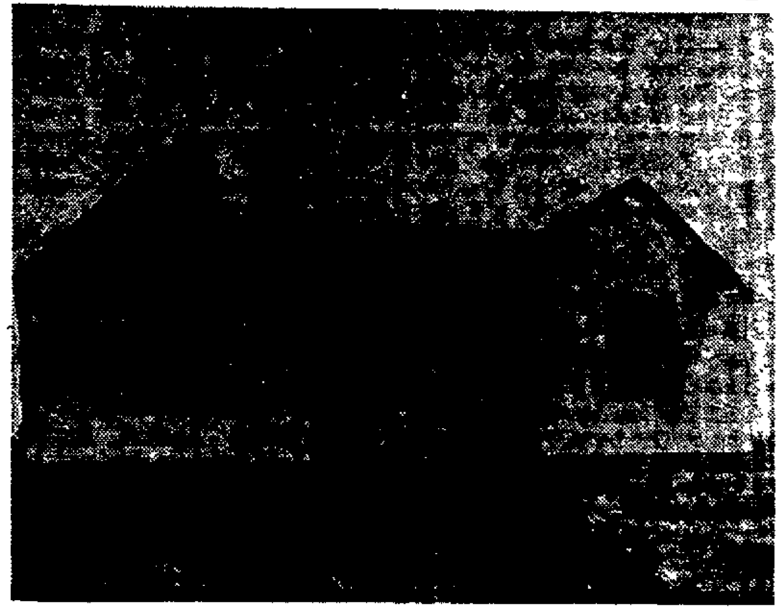
Spring water underlies the area where the Spring Lake allotment has been established, and several of the homes now have running water from their own wells. Electricity has been furnished for the allotment, but no sewage facilities are available. Each home owner must build his own septic tank for sewage disposal.

Contrary to most deals whereby a person can purchase land on such easy terms, a buyer can start building his house at Spring Lake as soon as he has signed the contract to purchase a lot. These range from $150 to $1,000, according to the situation of each. Choice corner lots and those beside the lake bring the highest prices.

HAVE COMMUNITY GROUP

Each lot owner pays five dollars per year into the community group, organized under the name of Spring Lake Fishing club, and is entitled to a vote in all affairs of the group. These include the administration of the lake and recreation area which covers five acres.

The acreage in the allotment, originally purchased by Johnson as a country estate, was thrown open in 1946. Since that time, 50 of the lots have been sold on the easy term plan and several have been entirely paid for by now.



HOMES — The two homes pictured above are typical of those which are beginning to appear at Spring Lake, a development on the Ashland road.

Reindeer Born In U. S. Experiment

COLDWATER, Mich. — (UP) — The first reindeer born in captivity in this country has appeared on the Edwin Butters ranch near here.

Three does and one buck were brought to the ranch two years ago by dog sled and plane from Alaska. Butters hopes to learn whether reindeer can become acclimated to Michigan weather.

During the spring and summer, the reindeer are kept in a large stall 10 feet below ground under the barn. A low temperature is maintained at all times. The 13-pound baby buck was born here.

Butters said this is the first attempt to import reindeer into this country since 1937.

Not Much Gain

HUNTINGTON, IND. — (UP) — A drug clerk, Keith Roudebush, found $10,000 in bonds 15 miles from home. He spent left behind by a woman shopper. He got a $1 reward.

Seek New Calendar

By HENRY C. NICHOLAS
Central Press

WASHINGTON—Dec. 31, 1950, promises to be a notable day, apart from the fact it marks the mid-turning point of the Twentieth Century. On this day under the sponsorship of the United Nations, the world is expected to shelve the calender confusion of the last two thousand years and begin the second half century living under the efficient, streamlined World Calendar.

For centuries scholars, business men and statesmen have urged the adoption of the World Calendar. The suggestion has been discussed and approved at many world conferences. It now looks as if definite action is about to be taken.

Seventeen countries have given formal approval to the World Calendar, the latest being the Republic of Panama. Twenty-four other governments have stated they will adopt and support such a change. These nations include those as far apart in their political views as Argentina, Australia, Japan, China, Turkey, Saudi Arabia and Czechoslovakia.

The one condition these nations have made is that some major power such as the United States, Great Britain, France or Russia take the initiative. The United States has accepted the invitation. Senator Estes Kefauver (D), Tennessee, has introduced a measure, which has been referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, which would give United States approval to the Word Calendar.

New Merchandise Shows Increasing Use of Color

By JOAN SCHWEITZ

This past-war era has seen many changes in merchandise. One of the most striking is the growing use of color in linens, clothing and furniture.

Before the war, and certainly during the period of dye shortages during the war, towels and linens, if colored at all, were pastel shades. Table cloths were seldom an all-over deep color. Now vivid hues seem to have taken over entire towel industry, and other linens are using more and more color.

New ways of working color with chrome have brought new color into furniture, particularly kitchen furniture.

Plastics, of course, have brought about the biggest change in post-war products. Hardly a home today, or office, or even a car, does not utilize plastic. New kitchen aids that would have been too costly in another material have been manufactured in plastic at a small price.

Electrical appliances have made great strides as have such "necessities" as automatic washing machines, mangles, and television sets. Before the war these products hardly were developed. Today, improvements come so fast that your model soon becomes outdated.

Nylon is being utilized in the women's wear business as it never was before. Gone are the days when nylon meant stockings. Today, nylon is just as likely to be the material in a woman's blouse, gloves or underwear, as in her stockings.

Congratulations Mansfield -- and Thank You!

Friebel & Hartman wish to congratulate Mansfield on its wonderful progress and also thanks Mansfield for the confidence accorded them in the varied constructions undertaken.

In 1936 Walter Friebel and Ray Hartman organized the Friebel & Hartman Company. Their operation began very humbly, however the fair dealing, service and fine construction had its results. In 1946, they incorporated and added James F. Davis as vice-president and chief engineer. The concern, still headed by its founders, is manned by a group of experienced, skilled and efficient employees, many of whom have been with the concern since its beginning. Friebel & Hartman pay tribute to the people of the area for their acceptance and to its employees for their fine record.

Among some of the area constructions undertaken by Friebel & Hartman are the following industrial, business and educational establishments:

Mansfield Airport
U. S. Naval Reserve
Sacred Heart Seminary

Capitalism Beneficial In Saudi Arabia

U. S. Know-How Scores Victory

CAIRO — (AP) — Barren Saudi Arabia has blossomed into living proof that U. S. capital and know - how can bring progress and mutual profit to backward nations.

It also shows that private enterprise can do the job, which is what President Truman claimed in his much-discussed "fourth point."

U. S. diplomats today are pointing to Saudi Arabia as proof the President is right. Moreover, they say what was done in King Ibn Saud's desert realm could be repeated in a general and perhaps less dramatic way in Latin America, southeast Asia and central or southeast Africa.

Journalists have been outlawed from Saudi Arabia by royal decree for nearly two years. Hence there is much still untold in the story of this medieval kingdom which suddenly found itself in the 20th century.

From fully responsible sources, the Associated Press at Cairo has learned some of the latest developments in Saudi Arabia. It is the story of a nation on the march.

The first part is well-known—how the Arabian - American Oil company (half - owned by Standard Oil Co. of California and half by the Texas Co.) in 1933 began oil prospecting under a 60-year concession.

Today $150,000,000 in oil installations daily takes tens of thousands of barrels of oil from the parched sands. Saudi Arabia receives between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 annually in oil royalties, U. S. officials say.

With that money King Ibn Saud is modernizing his kingdom. Five thousand Americans are in Saudi Arabia helping out or working in the oil fields which make the program possible.

By the end of the year Jeddah, Saudi Arabia's Red sea port, will have a pier for ocean-going vessels. That means Moslem pilgrims en route to Mecca can come directly into Jeddah and goods for Saudi Arabia's modernization will come in faster. The Bechtel International Corp. of San Francisco is doing the pier job.

A railway is being built inland across the hot sands from Daman on the Persian gulf. Latest information is that it has reached a point between Abqaiq and the rich oasis of El Hofuf. Trains are running over that section now. Ultimately it will go on to El Kharj where a U. S. agricultural mission is teaching Saudi Arabs modern tilling methods. Between 50 and 60 Union Pacific men are directing the railway program.

Radio has come to the desert kingdom. The government had Mackay radio put in a commercial transmitter and a long-wave broadcasting station now is underway. It will be linked with another station at Mecca so the faithful can hear religious services from the "heart of Islam."

Under the army "speed-up" system English is taught in less than two months. Mechanical skills are learned almost as quickly.

Trans - World Airways also has people at Daharan helping the Arabs learn air transport skills.

About $1,000,000 is being spent on improving airport runways. Many pilgrims to Mecca now will come in by plane instead of camel caravans.

Road building, construction of a rock-crushing plant and other projects are underway. So is the great trans - Arabian pipeline, which will go across the Arabian peninsula from the Persian gulf to the Mediterranean.

A prominent man who asked his name be withheld said:

"Saudi Arabia progresses a century a year. Today it's like the American frontier of the 1870's—just as virile, booming and exciting It shows in practice what the President's fourth point told of in theory."

NEARLY FINISHED—Work on the Church of God in Christ, one of the new churches being constructed in Mansfield since the war, is nearing completion this week. The two-story structure at 221 North Diamond street is of masonry construction finished in hand-painted stone of different colors.

Earthworms Have Important Role In Enriching Soil

The little earthworm, who to most persons is merely fishbait, has an important part in the making of food than many realize.

"Earthworms feed on organic matter, mineral soil, crop residues and manure," the Middle West Soil Improvement committee says. "They combine these substances into mixtures beneficial to the soil. Earthworms mix slime with soil particles. That helps stick the particles together into granules, improving soil structure and tilth. By tunneling through the earth, worms loosen the soil, making it more porous and more readily reached by air and water.

Tests by Dr. Henry Hopp, the committee reports, indicate that worms are more effective when fertilizer is added to the soil. Dr. Hopp found too, that fertilizer is more beneficial when earthworms are present.

Adding fertilizer boosted hay yields the equivalent of .52 tons per acre on soil containing worms. Without earthworms, the yield increase due to plant food averaged .28 tons.

The report concludes "earthworms do their best work in soil that provides them with plenty of nutrients. Well-fertilized deep - rooted legumes add large amounts of mineralized organic matter to the soil. That in turn gives earthworms more favorable conditions for doing their job of helping make farm soil more productive."

New, Modernized Buildings Dot City

Churches Build For Future

By EILEEN DEWHURST

The post-war years have been years of progress for Mansfield churches as well as for Mansfield business and industry.

City churches have kept pace with the growth in population and increased religious activities by erecting new buildings and expanding and remodeling old ones.

Among new church homes which have been built since 1945 are Temple Emanuel at Cook road and Lexington avenue, the Church of God at Wayne and Vine streets, Bethel Evangelical Congregational church off West Fourth street road, and the Lincoln Heights Gospel church.

In addition to the new churches already completed, work was begun the latter part of April on the first two units of a $400,000 new building at Millsboro road and Marion avenue which will house the First Congregational church. The two units now being erected are the sanctuary and religious education building. The congregation plans to add a chapel and social hall later. The new building will replace the century-old church on Park avenue west which was destroyed by fire seven years ago.

Also under construction is the new Church of God in Christ at 221 North Diamond street. Construction was started several weeks ago and services now are being held in the basement of the building. Expected to cost approximately $18,000, the finished building will be a two-story structure of masonry construction finished in hand-painted stone. The building is expected to be completed in about three weeks.

STARTS SEPT. 1

Work on a new Holy Trinity Lutheran church at Lexington avenue and Cook road is scheduled to start Sept. 1. The church structure will be built in three sections, the first a brick chapel of Gothic design which is expected to cost about $41,000. There will be Sunday school rooms in the basement of the building. The Holy Trinity church was organized April 10.

Members of the Holy Trinity church also have voted to purchase a parsonage for $11.000 in addition to raising funds for the new church building.

Probably the most extensive remodeling project to be undertaken by a city church since the war is scheduled to begin this summer. Members of the First Lutheran church are planning a remodeling program which will cost a total of $158,000.

The program will include installation of a complete new heating plant, a building at the rear of the parish house lot in which to house the new plant, remodeling of the entire church basement and the installation of new and modern equipment there for the children of the congregation.

Other remodeling and expansion projects already have been completed or are well under way in other Mansfield churches. Members of Shiloh Baptists church raised funds to finance work on Sunday school rooms and rest rooms in their church.

The First Methodist church completely revamped and refurnished its kitchen.

A total of $4,000 was spent by the First Presbyterian church in making the roof water tight in preparation for remodeling the sanctuary, and church parlors, kitchen, and dining room were remodeled, and a concrete floor was laid in the basement.

The Park Avenue Baptist church increased its property by purchasing the J. Harvey Dickson property at 560 Marion avenue for a parsonage. Purchase price was $19,000.

Rescue Three, Tired of Eggs

FAIRBANKS, ALASKA—(INS) — An elderly Louisiana State university botany professor, his wife and their pilot, marooned for seven days in the Arctic wastes, said today that they kept themselves alive on the 90 dozen eggs their downed plane carried.

Dr. Melville Cook, 79, his wife, also 79, and their pilot, Bill Carrington, were forced down when they became lost and their single-engined plane ran out of gas. He told rescuers: "We ate them raw and we ate them cooked."

He said he had had enough eggs to last him a long time.

Among the beetle family is one member known as the "bombardier." When distrubed it exudes a volatile fluid that explodes in smoke.

Tips On Cooling Off

Ancient Hindu Medics 'Beat the Heat'

NEW DELHI —(UP)— If you can't take hot weather, you might try some home made heat remedies that were invented in India a long time before anyone thought of electric refrigerators or air conditioning.

The treatment, as prescribed by the ancient Hindu medical system known as Ayurveda, calls for buttermilk, lemons, almonds and green mangoes.

You start the day with a buttermilk drink called "lassi." It is the most popular breakfast drink in India during the hot months, and it's made by whipping buttermilk, cold water and salt into a white froth.

It looks like a vanilla milkshake and tastes like cottage cheese. Taken in the morning, an Ayurvedic practitioner explained, it "cools the blood" and "prepares the system."

Before lunch you drink a mixture of lemon juice, sugar and water. The summer popularity of lemonade all over the world is no accident, according to Ayurveda. Hindus believe firmly in the "indgenous cooling powers" of the lemon.

In mid-afternoon you drink a cloudy combination of ground almonds, water and a little sugar. The almonds, soaked and peeled the night before, should be crushed into a paste just before the water is added.

At bedtime you have a mango shake. This takes more doing. The mangoes should be young and green, and they have to be baked in an oven beforehand. Then the dried meat is crushed and powdered, mixed with sugar or salt (or both) and stirred into a tall glass of cold water.

For cold drinking water, most Indians still depend on an ancient and ingenious kind of jug called the "chatti."

State, U. S. Saving Land

MINNEAPOLIS — (UP) — State and federal foresters have joined forces in a long - term forest land redemption program of possible significance to non-productive areas throughout the U. S.

The research project has immediate bearing on more than 1,000,000 acres of swamp land in northern Minnesota.

University of Minnesota researchers and foresters of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service made a working arrangement under which they have conducted experiments for the past two years. The agreement provides for a 10 - year study at the federal agency's Rice Lake national wildlife refuge in Minnesota's lake country.

There, on a 15,000 - acre tract, scientists are seeking to discover what types of shrubs and trees can be planted to reclaim marsh meadow, thereby providing game cover and possibly bringing the land into commercial timber production.

Results of the study are to be made available to the federal government, which in turn will be able to supply the findings to other swamp areas.

"Historical records as well as relics of burned and charred trees indicate that much of what is now marsh meadow was formerly more or less continuous forest," a report on the project stated.

The bow and arrow were first used in the Old Stone Age.

Dad Rescues Infant Son

CHARDON — (INS) — Thirteen-month-old Fred Platka jr., may not realize it, but he has his father to thank that he is alive today.

Platka found his son floating in the water of a milk cooling vat on the family's farm in Chardon.

He quickly took the boy from the water, applied artificial respiration to revive him, and then drove to the office of Dr. Philip Pease of Chardon, where oxygen was given.

JUSTICE FROM ON HIGH

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — (UP) — Deputy Sheriff Jack Dailey scaled the heights to arrest two burglars. Dailey climbed into an observation post atop a tree, where he gathered evidence to arrest Ralph Dozeman and Leon Christian, who admitted breaking into 12 taverns this spring.

Post-War Homes Show New Trend

Smaller, Compact Houses Being Built

New trends in home building have given post-war Mansfield houses a different look than those built before and during the war.

One of the most important trends has been toward smaller, more compact homes. This trend has been largely due to increasing construction costs which make the building of large homes prohibitive for the average family.

Although homes are smaller, architects have sacrificed nothing in the way of utility or beauty

One of the most popular and attractive styles is the ranch type. This type usually is a one-floor structure with a combined living-dining room and two or three bedrooms

A variety of outside building materials is being used in ranch-type homes. Usually two or more materials are used to give the building a more spacious look Such materials as brick and wood, cement block and wood, cinder block and wood, or a combination of these usually are used.

BASEMENTS OMITTED

In many homes basements have been done away with in favor of utility rooms on the main floor Omission of the basements cuts construction costs, but such homes must be provided with radiant heating or some other heating system which does not require a basement plant.

There has been an increasing use of glass in post-war homes. Especially popular are large picture windows which make the interior of rooms seem larger and add to the attractiveness of the exterior.

An idea which began before the war and has increased recently is that of having the garage attached to the house. This eliminates the necessity of going outside in bad weather to reach the family automobile.

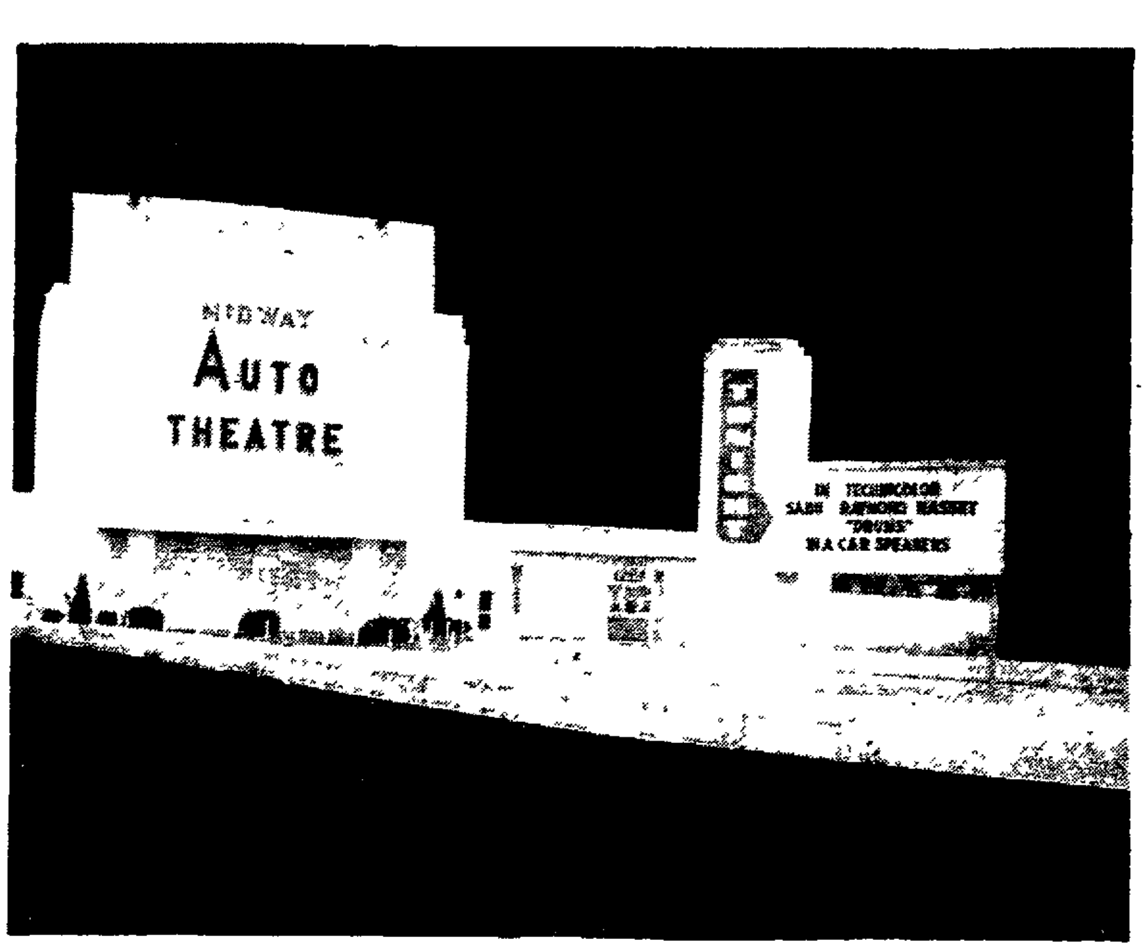
Although many new homes are one - floor ranch or bungalow type, many two-story homes are still being built. Some of the one-floor structures have multiple levels — that is, some of the rooms are one or two steps up from others.

L - shaped homes also have proved popular since they can be built on less expensive, narrow lots Some of these homes have basements under one part of the house to provide room for heating plants and storage space.

When the housing shortage became critical in the post-war period, steel and other pre-fabricated homes became popular Most of these homes are in the lower price range and can be erected in a much shorter time than an ordinary house However, building codes restrict these homes in many sections of the country and production is still fairly low

Not Broadening

NEW ORLEANS — (UP) — A J. Sauviac, 65 who retired as a railroad engineer after a 40-year career, estimated that he piloted trains a total of 200,000 miles without ever getting over 15 miles from home He spent his whole career on a switch engine.



3 Drive-In Theaters Built In Area In Past Two Years

Three drive-in theaters have been added to the Mansfield area scene in the past two years

These include the Mansfield-Galion drive - in theater on Route 30-S between Mansfield and Galion, the Midway auto theater on the As land road, between Mansfield and Ashland, and the newest of the three, the Tri-City drive - in theater on U. S. 30-N, midway between Bucyrus and Crestline.

The Mid-Way drive-in theater was constructed in 1947 and opened in September of that year It has a capacity of 600 cars The theater has in-the-car control speakers.

George Richard, the manager, related the area once was a swamp, requiring fill-in and a four-inch layer of white gravel The screen covers 57-square feet The theater tower is 90 feet high.

Ramps for the cars permit the forward end to the car to be higher than the back end, allowing an unobstructed view of the screen from the back seat

The Tri-City drive-in theater was opened June 15. It has a capacity of 800 cars. Doyle Jacobs, manager, said the threater has a 50 by 67-foot screen. There are ramps for cars. The theater has in-the-car speakers.

Jacobs said workmen still were working on the front of theater and it would be completed in about three weeks The operating firm has 12 Bucyrus stockholders, headed by Wade Kimerline, as president

The theater has a concession at the rear and Jacobs said a person in the restaurant, 225 feet from the screen, can see and hear the movie.

ENGLEHARD, N C — (UP) — Behind its new brick successor here stands a weathered old church, placed there by nature when the owner of the land refused to let the congregation put it there

Years ago the congregation of Providence M E Church wanted to buy the lot for a new church but the owner refused to sell

Then a storm swept in from the ocean and Pamlico Sound spilled over this small coastal town The tide picked up the old church, carried it gently and left it on the disputed lot

The owner, believing he had witnessed a divine omen deeded the property immediately, free

Picks Wrong Place To Get Night's Rest

NEW ORLEANS —(UP)— Oscar Perry, 52, got 15 days in jail for spending a few nights in a cemetery He rested better in the cemetery.

After police caught Perry snoring away between two vaults, he explained to Municipal Judge Harold Moore that it was purely a question of expediency.

He said he had a room, but he also had two jobs During the day he mowed lawns and at night he cleaned a barroom.

"It was hot in the little room and I was always going back and forth to work," he said "The graveyard is close to my jobs and I could lie out there and think it over "I always slept between the vaults Never right at the foot of one I got nothing against the people resting there and they don't seem to have nothing against me resting with them A graveyard is a nice, cool place"

Scientists Study Space Rockets

Man-Made 'Moons' Now Called Possible

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Military engineers agree with independent scientists that it is now technically possible to launch a rocket which would revolve around the earth like the moon.

Tests based on the army's experiments with a "two-stage" rocket show that fuels and materials now in use are capable of giving an earth-launched object speed and altitude which would keep it revolving forever in the heavens.

The army, at White Sands, N. M, last February, mounted an American - made "Wac Corporal" rocket on top of a German V-2 rocket. The "Wac Corporal" took the place of the V-2's warhead

Each rocket by itself was capable of an altitude of about 100 miles and a speed of around 2,000 miles an hour But when the "wac Corporal" took off from the nose of the V-2, it reached an altitude of 251 miles and a speed of 5,000 miles an hour

It had acquired all the speed first generated by the V-2, plus all the speed it was able to generate on its own power.

Tests and calculations made in the military establishment's "earth satellite vehicle program" show there is no technical reason why a three-stage, a four-stage or even a five-stage rocket could not be built.

The final rocket would then acquire the multiplied speeds of the other two, three or four in the succession, and would reach the speed necessary to create an earth satellite—18,000 miles an hour

Scientists engaged on the project explain that the "step" or "stage" principle appears complicated and surprising only because human beings are accustomed to air resistance

They say that wherever air resistance or a large part of it is removed, the "step principle operates in a familiar way.

For instance, an insect flies from back to front of a speeding railroad car with the same ease it would move the same distance in a stationary room

With relation to the ground the insect's speed is temporarily greater than that of the train but most of the air resistance its ground speed ordinarily would involve has been removed by the closed railroad car.

In a complete absence of friction—if the train were moving through space — the situation would be the same inside and outside the car, and any motion set up would tend to continue indefinitely

If an insect could give itself a 20-mile-an-hour forward push from an 80-mile-an-hour space train, the insect would continue to move at a speed of 100 miles an hour forever, or until it encountered resistance

In the same way, if a rocket attains a speed of 6,000 miles an hour, and a second rocket of equal power takes off from the nose of the first, the second rocket will acquire a speed of 12,000 miles an hour.

If a third rocket takes off from the nose of the second, the third will go 18,000 miles an hour. Since bodies in space maintain their current speed without effort, any expenditure of effort will produce additional speed.

Thus with three 6,000-mile-an-hour rockets, an 18,000-mile-an-hour velocity is theoretically achieved. Corrections of this to overcome friction and gravity apply mainly to the first 25 miles of the rocket's journey.

At 18,000 miles an hour a properly launched object would move one mile horizontally to the earth's surface in the time that it would "fall" eight inches. Its "fall" would be merely enough to curve its path into an orbit

Scientists point out that the curvature of the earth amounts to eight inches a mile, and that the earth's surface would recede away from the speeding object at the same rate as its 'fall", They say the object would be in a fixed orbit, and also in a state of "free fall."

Ready-Mix Operations Expanded

Cement Delivery Plant Shows Growth

Among the newer, rapidly growing concerns in Mansfield which has contributed to the building expansion of the city is Ready - Mixed Concrete, Inc., 225 Oak street road.

Starting in business in 1945 at 341 East Second street, Herbert Rusk, president of the firm conducted business with two truck mixers. At that time plant materials were placed in the two trucks dry, and were mixed inside the truck during delivery to the construction job.

On March 1, the company was moved to its new location and housed in a $150,000 plant which is said to be the largest and most modern plant of its kind in this part of the country.

Production capacity at the new plant is at least three times as much as in the old plant, Rusk said. There now are seven trucks making delivery of the Ready - Mixed product, including both truck mixers and non - agitating delivery units.

Instead of Mixing the Materials on the truck as formerly, a plant operator now mixes every yard of concrete which leaves the plant before it goes into the trucks.

Ready - Mix is made from sand, gravel or limestone and Portland cement, the materials being shipped in hopper-bottom cars which discharge the contents into a pit and then onto a 24 - inch conveyor which is 251 feet long.

This, in turn, transports the materials up into the Octo - Bin. The equipment at the Oak Street plant can unload a carload of sand or gravel every 15 minutes.

Currently the Ready - Mixed firm is delivering materials to the 164th National Guard Fighter Squadron project at the Municipal airport for Friebel and Hartman, Inc., general contractors, under the supervision of the U. S. Corps of Engineers. Ready-mixed concrete is also sold at the plant.

The company is furnishing concrete at frequent intervals to Newman school, Lincoln Heights school, the addition to the Bellville high school, Christian Science church, Richland county Tuberculosis Sanatorium, and the new First Congregational church building.

Farm Youths Aid In Research On New Uses of Electricity

Time and motion studies are not tools of industry alone. In Ohio more than 500 farms have become proving grounds where boys and girls enrolled in the 1949 National 4-H Better Methods Electric awards program are finding easier and better ways of doing a job. Everything from unloading grain to washing dishes is analyzed to save time and energy.

Club members keep records of accomplishments, and for the best in each county a gold-filled medal of honor is given. The state winner is given an educational trip to the National 4-H club congress in Chicago and for the six top ranking members in the nation, a $300 scholarship is awarded.

To the county reporting the most outstanding 4-H better methods electric program the Westinghouse Electric corporation sends a plaque. Wayne Wachtel, Holmes county received a medal last year and Holmes county received the plaque.

U. S. Groups Can't Agree

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Rep. Bolton (R-Ohio) said yesterday it is "amusing" for three American groups to disagree on how international alliances should be shaped to work for peace, while each expects large groups of nations to accept its plan.

Mrs. Bolton is a veteran member of the house foreign affairs committee.

She said she referred to backers of the Atlantic Union, United World Federalist and so-called Culbertson plans for international cooperation for peace.

Alaska Regarded as Nation's Newest 'Pot of Gold'

By H. D. CRAWFORD
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Alaska's newest "pot of gold" is the discovery that rivers of the vast territory could produce 50 billion kilowatt hours of electric energy every year.

This would give 10,000,000 people more than twice as much electric power as you and I now have available in the United States. Alaska's rivers are so abundantly supplied with power sites that remotest regions could be provided with electric power.

These conclusions have been reached by Department of the Interior experts investigating potentialities of developing and using water and related resources of Alaska. They have worked under a reclamation act passed a year ago to provide Congress with information as a basis for future legislation.

In one of the most comprehensive and significant reports ever prepared on Alaska's resources and future potentialities, the Information which the American people should know so they will demand that Congress take appropriate action.

Alaska's rich and undeveloped resources have a new importance in a world that has exhausted so many of its resources in war that it is now turning to the undeveloped regions.

When Russia sold Alaska to the United States in 1867, the Russians had stripped the area of its rich fur resources and believed it was virtually worthless. They may have felt the $7,200,000 we paid them was a bargain.

* * *

AMERICANS however, have been amazingly slow to appreciate the economic value and strategic importance of Alaska. Our armed forces were shocked into realizing the error of their apathy when the Japanese seized the Aleutian islands in World War II. It will be unfortunate if we have to undergo a similar rude awakening before we realize Alaska's economic importance.

Numerous settlers have gone to the territory since the war. Many are veterans who realized the business, farm, or professional potentialities of the area while stationed there during the war. While the population is the largest in Alaska's history, it is still only about 100,000 people including natives.

Alaska planners visualize a future population of possibly 5,000,000 or more. Alaska's resources, they contend, could sustain such a population. Among developments to substantiate his belief are these:

1 — Alaska's first paper mill is being constructed, and it is believed that five paper mills can operate indefinitely, providing employment for thousands of Americans and vast amounts of paper for American printing presses. Merchantable lumber reserves are also estimated to exceed 180 billion board feet.

2 — Alaska's mineral potentials are enormous. Coal estimates, for example, are 110 billion tons. Not only do these suggest huge industries in the future, but also rich sources of future wealth to the United States.

3 — Alaska is one of the world's major undeveloped areas. Some observers are already concerned lest the United Nations demand that Alaska be opened up to Europeans or overcrowded Asiatics for development before Americans wake up and do this developing job themselves.

4 — The territory is now fully recognized to be one of the most strategic regions in any air-age war. All the world's major powers are north of the equator, and shortest distances between several of them are across the Arctic. Alaska needs more people to bolster defense, as well as for economic development.

"No one knows the value of Alaska's hidden mineral wealth," says the report; "however, Alaska's billion board feet of timber that could be cut in perpetuity, the millions of acres of crops that could be harvested, and the 50,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours of energy that could be produced by river control systems represent a loss to America of more than $1,000,000,000 every year."

Obstacles that still stand in the way of Alaska's development could probably be removed by constructive legislation and sound industrial practice.

* * *

STATEHOOD would help greatly, Interior department officials believe. "Alaska has suffered for many years under what is virtually a colonial system that has encouraged absentee exploration of its natural resources without leaving enough social and economic benefits for the territory," according to Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug.

"Alaska needs a tremendously increased population to develop its resources . . . but we cannot get several million people to go to Alaska if we are to deprive them of their rights as citizens when they step across the boundary," he says.

Alaska still is an "economic island," with transportation costs excessive and resulting prices extremely high.

When we realize that Nome is 500 miles farther west than the Hawaiian islands, and that Katchikan, Alaska's most southerly port, is 650 to 730 nautical miles closer to Vladivistok, Hong Kong, Shanghai and Singapore than is San Francisco, we can visualize the possibilities of Alaska's future trade relations with Asia.

Americans need to wake up to the value of Alaska and our other territorial possessions and demand that Congress take appropriate action to assure the protection and development of their resources and their defenses for the best interests of the whole American people.

New Power Equipment Aids City

OPS Increases Community Service

If all Mansfielders suddenly decided to install a total of 330,000 new 100-watt lightbulbs in their homes and businesses, the amount of power required to operate that number of bulbs would just equal the additional electric power equipment added by the OPS since the close of the war.

The major increase in power available to Mansfield was in the installation of a 33,333 KVA transformer by the Mansfield division of the Ohio Public Service company at the Longview sub-station two years ago.

This new power equipment at the Longview sub-station has more than doubled the electrical power which is available to Mansfield's growing industries and multiplying homes.

The Longview sub-station is the hub of all electrical power and services to Mansfield where the newly-installed 33,333 KVA transformer will be joined by an identical unit this fall, nearly doubling the present power available to the area.

The Longview sub - station houses the electrical company's two-way ultra-high-frequency radio equipment which keeps the electrical power source in constant communication with repair crews which may be miles away. These radios also are a part of the post-war expansion program.

SERVICE SPEEDED

The radio hook-up between the station and the trucks on repair jobs, has demonstrated its proficiency not only in speeding routine work, but in the immediate restoring of electricity to Mansfielders after a storm or other interference has disrupted the usual steady source of heat, light, music, and power, company officials said.

Before the radios were installed in many of the company's trucks, it took a considerable amount of time to restore current to an area after wires had been broken by one cause or another.

This was due to the fact that first the electricity to that area had to be turned off at the main station, then the repair crews drove to the place where power had been disrupted to make repairs, and then they drove back to Longview and closed the switch restoring electrical power to that area.

Using the radios (operating at approximately the same frequency as the new FM receivers), the repair crews can drive directly to the scene of the current failure, receive their instructions there on repairs to be made, and then radio back to the main station when to release the surge of power back through the wires.

The OPS also is completing another installation which will guard against electrical failures throughout the city.

At present, if an electrical transmission line is put out of service between Longview and an individual's home, that line must be repaired before electrical service can be restored to the home.

But, when the OPS completes a power "belt" around Mansfield in the near future, current supply will be restored to any one area by merely routing the electricity to that home by a different power line in the "belt."

The "belt" of electricity will encircle Mansfield at its outer edges. Theoretically the current will flow from the Longview sub-station clockwise down to East Mansfield, over Cook road, around Woodland and then Roseland, and eventually around the north industrial section and back to the main power station.

If a break in the power line should occur between Longview and East Mansfield, disrupting power to the entire city, the electricity could immediately be restored to the city by simply rerouting the electricity counter-clockwise back around Mansfield.

The city's new water supply at Clear Fork also has entered into the OPS's post-war expansion program.

The company spent $75,000 to extend a 24,000 volt transmission line to the site of the Clear Fork pumping station to provide adequate electrical power for the supplying of Mansfield's daily drink of water.

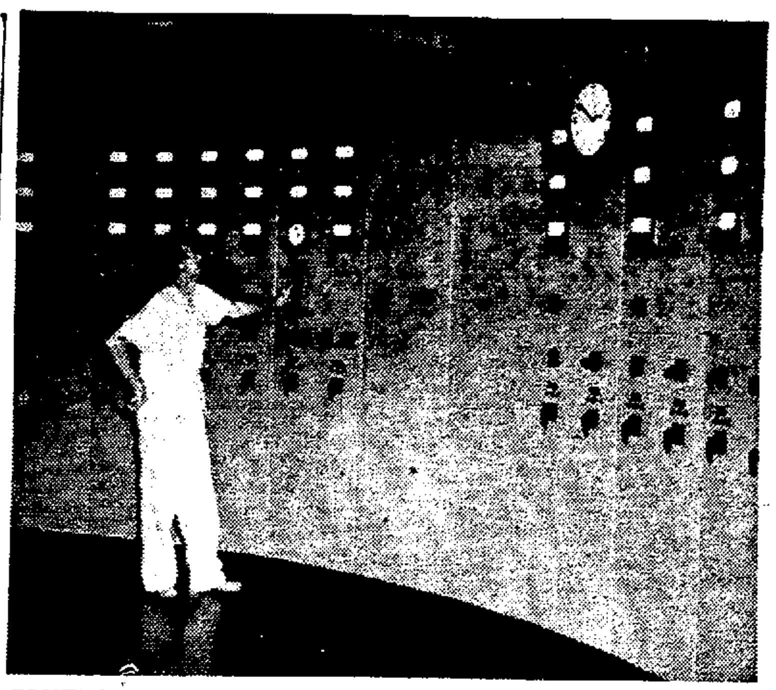
RURAL AREAS SERVED

The rural areas and Mansfield's outlying districts have not been neglected by the electric company in its future plans.

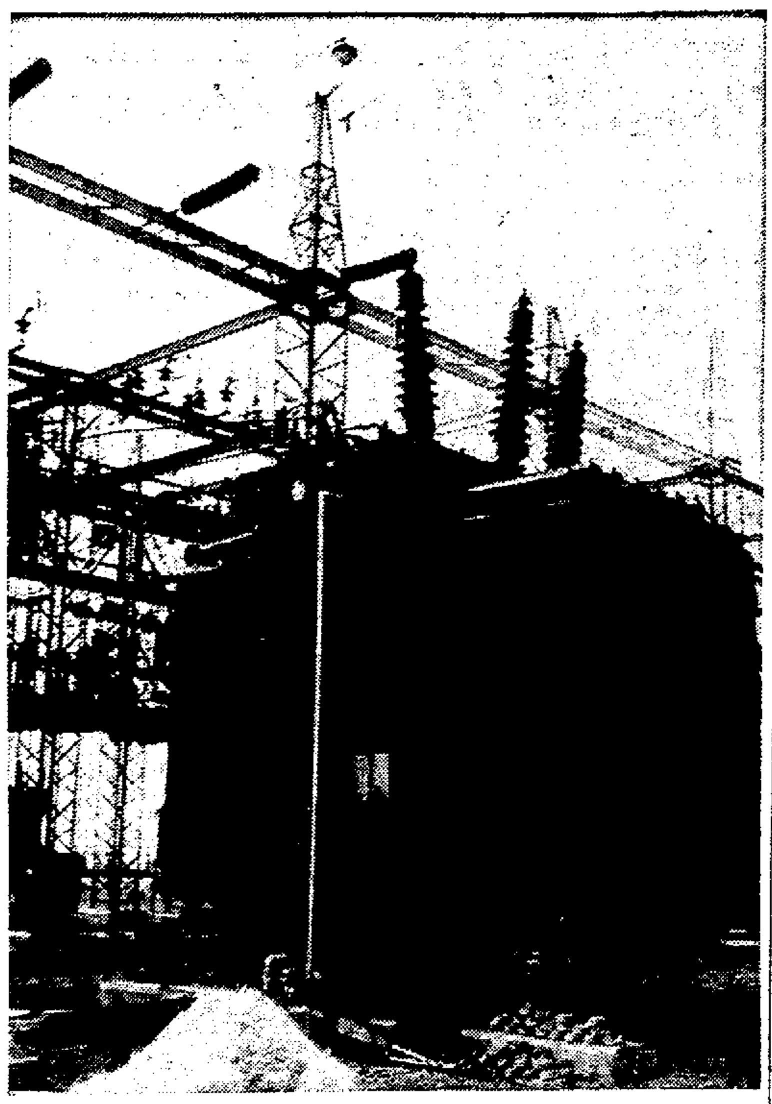
Just last year, OPS built a new 24,000-volt line out the Olivesburg road into northeastern Richland county and constructed a new sub-station at the same road and the Erie railroad crossing at a total cost of $96,000. Work also has begun on 13 miles of additional power lines in Weller, Franklin, and Bloominggrove townships to provide for expansion in the northern portion of the county.

Nearing completion now is a $46,000 sub-station on West Longview avenue near Bowman street, and plans are being laid for a $50,000 station in the rapidly-growing section of Fairlawn avenue and Millsboro and Taylor roads.

Altogether, the post - war expenditures of the OPS used to increase electrical power facilities in the Mansfield area have totaled more than $1,580,000.



CONTROLS POWER—When a group of Mansfield electric power users suddenly stop using a large amount of electricity, the voltage in the city's power lines goes up. A. W. Higgins, OPS sub-station operator, is regulating this voltage at the electric company's main power station in Mansfield, located on Longview avenue. The electrical board controls the electricity that flows to every part of Mansfield.



TRANSFORMER — This new transformer at the Lungview sub-station was installed two years ago. The new power equipment at Longview more than doubled the electrical power available to Mansfield. Further expansion in power supply is planned.

Japanese Girls Spurn Melon Faces, Flock To Buy Falsies

TOKYO — (UP) — One hundred years ago you could thrill a Japanese girl by telling her she had a face like a melon seed.

Today she wants to be told she looks like Lana Turner.

The old Japanese warlords wanted their girl firends to have oval faces. They called them "urizanegao," or melon seed faces.

And 100 years ago, if you wanted to insult a lady, you hinted that her chest was not as flat as that of the other women in town. But that has changed too, and today the Japanese bobby-soxers are flocking to the fashion shops which feature "American style falsies."

Most Japanese girls now prefer the western manner of dress. For one thing, they say they are treated "more deomcratically" when they have on dresses than when they are in kimono.

Lots of changes are taking place, but there always have been changes in fashions here from time to time. For example, even the so-called "traditional" kimono has developed from an ancient loose costume to the modern tight garment that it is.

While the Japanese girls now want to bulge in the right places, their sisters of old hated to see those additional pounds come on, since very slender figures bring out the elegance and beautiful lines of the kimono to a better advantage. It was a desire to harmonize the face with the slender body that decreed a melon seed face to be the most fashionable.

The dream girl of the Tokugawa warrior was a bashful little creature with oval face, narrow waist, small hips and delicate hands and feet.

The women of Tokugawa days attached a great deal of importance to their manner of walking, sitting down or carrying themselves.

When she was standing, she was supposed to look like one kind of peony; when sitting she was supposed to resemble a different peony. A walking lady, the rules declared, had to remind people of a lily.

Kenneth Nixon, Mansfield, R D 4, has one of the few hay driers in Richland county and, as far as he knows, the first He built it about four years ago after he made a trip to Columbus to look at one at Ohio State university

The drier is 88 feet long, four feet wide and eight feet high The air is pushed through it by a giant 48-inch fan driven by a seven and one half horse-power motor

Nixon said that in fair weather if the hay put in the barn is fairly green it takes about two weeks to dry.

The air filters up through the hay from 27 lateral openings in the wind tunnel Because it filters up, Nixon says, greener hay than usual can be put in the barn The piled hay never gets hot as long as air is moving through it, he declared

Nixon chops all his hay with a field chopper Under usual circumstances chopped hay is susceptible to heating and fire but the drier eliminates that danger

The drier, which extends from one end of his barn to the other, has air-tight floor and walls

One of the big advantages to the farmer who uses this type drier is that he can get his hay in earlier in the season, during the time of year when the protein value of the feed is higher

Nixon said this means an increase in value of the hay as much as $10 a ton

FARM AID—Carolyn Nixon 11, stands beside the giant fan in the wind tunnel of her father s hay drier This 48 inch fan pushes the air through the 88-foot long tunnel and through the hay piled in the barn on Kenneth Nixon's Ashland road farm.

Want Smaller Election Ballot

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The Citizens League here believes a smaller ballot with fewer names will result in more intelligent voting Because the ballot con tains an "overabundance of primary candidates on county and local levels," the league recom mended pre - primary conventions for these groups

It also proposed Appointment, rather than election of judges minor officials and those whose duties require special knowledge redistributing Cuyahoga county into four voting areas, each with four or five representatives in the state legislature

Twenty-seven Nebraska counties are listed among the top hundred in the United States for acres of corn grown.

Bares Hazards In Line Work

HUTCHINSON Kan — (UP) — One way to hold off a mad bull is to grab the ring in his nose and yank it His nose will bleed and confuse him long enough to allow the holder to turn loose and run

At least, George Roberson says it works He has had several occasions to do it while walking 100,000 miles in 20 years as a Kansas Power and Light Co line walker

Roberson has a plan for outwitting rattlesnakes, too He allows the snake to strike the sole of his heavy boots

"That makes him cover his head in pain," Roberson said "Then I cut him in half with a knife "

State Fair Will Open On Aug. 27

Event Was Twice Held In Mansfield

The 95th Ohio State fair will open its gates in Columbus Aug. 27. Few Mansfielders remember when Mansfield played host to the throngs from all over the state who came to the state fair when it was held here.

In the years 1872 and 1873 Mansfield played host to the annual event. In fact, those two years were the last times that the fair has been held outside of Franklin county.

From 1874 until 1886, the fair was held annually on the grounds of the Franklin County Agricultural society in what is now known as Franklin park.

Since 1886, the exposition has been located on the present grounds in the northeast section of the state capitol. In 1924 the original tract of 115 acres was increased to 150, the present size.

The first state fair took place Oct. 5-7, 1850, at Camp Washington, near Cincinnati, after two previous postponements because of the outbreak of cholera.

Ohio now has 88 county and independent fairs, attended by about three million persons each year. Richland county will hold its "junior fair" Aug. 18, 19, 20 at the Fair Grounds on Springmill street.

The Ohio State fair board has announced plans for the Columbus event already. Here are some of the details.

The admission for adults will be 50 cents plus tax and children under 12 will be admitted free.

There will be music contests, awards for horses in senior and junior divisions, and a 200 piece All-Ohio boy's band made up of the state's best high school instrumentalists will provide daily entertainment at the fair. Dr. Louis E. Pete, Ashland, will be the conductor.

$25,000 Judgment Finding Reversed

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A common pleas court judge Monday reversed a verdict awarding $25,000 to a French war bride in her alienation of affections suit.

The bride, Mrs. Madeline Horton, 34, is a tuberculosis patient in city hospital. She had sued her mother - in - law, Mrs. Lillian E. Hoffman. The award was believed to have been the largest ever made in a suit of that type here.

FROM MERCHANDISING TO MILKING—Gilmore Hiett winds up his daily task of advertising manager for the Gorman-Rupp company by milking his "herd" of five Guernsey cows on his 100-acre farm in Ashland county near Mifflin. Hiett had the "kickers" on the cow, not so much to keep "Bossy" from kicking, but more to keep her tail out of his face, he said.

Urges Apple Tree Spraying For Maggot, Codling Moth

Area apple growers whose trees are plagued by the apple maggot and the codling moth were advised today by County Agent C. N. McGrew to begin spraying their trees now if they have not already done so.

If the apple maggot is the problem spray all the apple trees whether they are bearing or not, McGrew said. The proper spray is a lead arsenate, three pounds, and a flotation type sulphur eight pounds, mixed with 100 gallons of water. Microfine dry wettable sulphur in a five pound amount may be substituted for the flotation type sulphur, the county agent advised.

McGrew said that growers who did not apply the dormant oil spray, probably will be noticing red mites on the leaves. If they do, they are advised to include one of the dinitro, or other special red mite spray materials in the above spray. This is to be applied to the under surface of the leaves and may be repeated if necessary.

Peach growers too were given advice about sprays by the extension office. Badly infested orchards should have been sprayed first on June 23 for September maturing varieties. This treatment is to be continued on July 12 and Aug. 1.

Do not use a spray closer than two weeks to harvest. The spray formula is two pounds of DDT (50 per cent wettable powder), five or six pounds of microfine dry wettable powder and 100 gallons of water.

Cows Make Top Records

Farmers Get Test Reports

Three area farmers have received records this week of tests made by the Herd Improvement Registry department of the Holstein-Fresian association.

Willeben Royal Ambassador, a cow owned by W. B. Cockley, Lexington, had the following record after 351 days of milking, twice a day: 734 pounds of butterfat, 21,513 pounds of milk. The animal was 11 years and one month old.

Open Road Segis Linda, owned by C. W. Watts, Killbuck, gave 594 pounds of butterfat in 14,929 pounds of milk in the 284 day milking period. She is six years and three months old.

The Mansfield Reformatory's Lady Ona Ornsby gave 582 pounds of fat, 16.076 pounds of milk in 365 days. This cow is nine years and eight months old.

Confesses Slaying

NEW YORK — (INS)—Raymond Martinez Fernandez, co-defendant in the "Lonely Hearts" murder trial, testified on the witness stand yesterday that he shot and killed a 24-year-old widow in her Michigan home last Feb. 26.

His admission, made casually, caused a gasp of astonishment in the crowded Bronx Supreme courtroom of Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Even the judge stared in apparent disbelief at the bald-headed, 34-year-old Lothario as he sat calmly on the stand, dressed again in his camel-hair jacket and contrasting slacks.

Only one other person in the room seemed unmoved—Mrs. Martha Jule Beck, 29, his 200-pound co-defendant. Sitting at the defense table, she permitted no emotion to cross her pudgy features.

Fernandez and Mrs. Beck, who were extradited to New York from Michigan, face the electric chair for the bludgeoning and strangulation murder last Jan. 4 of Mrs. Janet J. Fay, 66-year-old Albany widow, in a house in Valley Stream, L.I.

The witness, without warning, was suddenly asked by Prosecutor Edward Robinson the question:

"Is it not a fact that on Feb. 26, 1949, you shot and killed Mrs. Delphene Downing in her home in Byron Center, Michigan?"

"That is true."

Antarctic Wealth Said To Be Myth

Scientist Raps 'Colored' Stories

By ARTHUR SCHOLES

(Member of Australian Antarctic expedition recently returned from Heard Island)

SYDNEY, Australia —(UP)— Fantastic stories appearing in popular "scientific" magazines in the United States about the so-called untold mineral wealth of Antarctica are giving the world a misleading and completely unrealistic picture of the southern continent

Such headlines as "Nations Race for Antarctic Uranium," or "Secret Plans to Bore Thousands of Feet Through Ice," are highly colored and imaginative.

Articles on those lines were included in a bunch of magazines taken with the Australian expedition of Heard Island. They were a source of intense amusement to all of us

Nowhere could there be found greater admirers of the magnificent work done by Admiral Byrd and his colleagues among the Australian expedition men but such stories detract from the real scientific value of the work done by the Americans Scientists have found little evidence of mineral wealth in the Antarctic The expense of exploiting the existing discoveries might well exceed the cost of the Manhattan project ($2.000,000,000).

To understand the enormous difficulties involved in the mineral exploitation of the southern continent requires only a simple knowledge of physiography.

Apart from the ever-shifting moat of pack ice and icebergs, a girdle of hundreds of miles around the continent, the land mass is a vast ice sheet thousands of feet thick Only the highest mountains remain unburied

Australian scientists who accompanied Scott and Shackleton expeditions 40 years ago found iron, copper and molybdenum, but there have not yet been found deposits that would be commercially attractive

The remoteness of the continent and the conditions that would have to be overcome by any organization endeavoring to conduct and industrial undertaking there would make the task colossal.

Even if the Antarctic regions were to hold great wealth, to locate it and mine it under present-day conditions would seem to be impossible.

Quite a few scientists consider the Antarctic coal measures will not be worked until those of the rest of the world have been exhausted

Much of the Antarctic continent resembles the uranium bearing district of the Arctic, but to say that it therefore contains deposits of uranium and vast quantities of other raw materials is just guesswork It will be many years before the entire continent has been geologically surveyed

Midwest Prepares For Centralized Exchange

CHICAGO — (AP) — A single stock exchange covering most of the middle west is setting up shop here. It has been voted overwhelmingly by several existing regional exchanges, with a tentative opening date of Sept 1

At present there are exchanges in Cleveland with 44 members, St Louis 37, Cincinnati 31, Minneapolis 19, Detroit 50, and Chicago 296 members Interest in the plan also has been displyed by Pittsburgh and New Orleans

James E. Day, president of the Chicago stock exchange, and prime mover for the merger, said it is the third in a series of major improvements being initiated in stock trading by this exchange.

First came an "unrestricted" list of inactive stocks about two years ago This, Day explained, in effect placed such issues in a free market where all members and other brokers and dealers could trade in them on or away from the exchange—whichever was in the best interest of the public.

Then last year "clearing - by - mail" — in operation a forerunner of the merger system — started for exchange member firms in cities within overnight mail distance of Chicago

The next advance after the merger, it is reported, will be the introduction of a system of centralized bookkeeping for the exchange and its member firms, designed to save substantial sums in "back office" costs

"For the last four years," Day said, "it has been the policy of this exchange to put its operations and the operations of its member firms in a laboratory to find new and better ways to cut costs and create better business for its member firms

Los Angeles Climbs High In Population

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Los Angeles, the city of unlimited limits and ambition, awaits the census taker next year like a kid waiting for his first peek at Santa Claus

The city of restless angels already has reached its 1950 goal of 2 000,000 people and is ready to give Philadelphia and Detroit a stout argument for third spot behind New York and Chicago.

That should make for much happiness in this overgrown village—as San Franciscans are prone to call it—but some of the city fathers are beginning to have some doubts

These municipal planners — to the dismay of booster agencies — have indicated they would like to pull every lever in sight to stem the tide of population until housing, roads, transportation and industries can be built to accommodate everybody

The "in migrants," as the men with the graphs call them, are still coming in a steady stream. The rate has been nearly 8 000 new residents per month since World War II ended.

The Los Angeles planning commission estimated the city's population at 2 021 236 in March The official 1950 figure may top 2,100,000 — or 600,000 more than the 1,504 277 in 1940 The growth is roughly equal to the total populations of Milwaukee, Buffalo or New Orleans

This is the village which numbered 5 728 inhabitants in 1870 and by 1900 had just passed the 100 000 mark

Charles Bennett, city planning director, has a chart that shows Los Angeles hitting the three million mark in 1970 — with the county up around six million Most folks figure that's conservative.

What goes on here has to be seen to be understood, and then you can't always believe it. By the time you look back, whole neighborhoods have sprung up, complete with supermarts, service stations and finance companies

Whatever else Los Angeles may exaggerate, there's no denying its size It extends from San Pedro harbor 50 miles northward to Newhall It contains mountains, beaches, valleys, semi-desert — and slums about as bad as you'll find almost anywhere

The whole adds up to 452 square miles, nearly 100 more than New York City. There's still plenty of room to put up whole cities — 212 square miles in San Fernando valley alone, for example.

But if space is the least of Los Angeles' worries, water — or the lack of it — could be the worst

The city gets most of its water from the Owens Valley project in the high Sierra nearly 250 miles away. So far it has not had to dip deeply into Colorado river reserves

But in an extended drought period — such as the present one — the situation could become serious. Perhaps not for the average citizen, but certainly for the city's hope of luring heavy industry with cheap power.

Beggar King Tells Secrets Of the Trade

SINGAPORE — (AP) — A beggar's rags should be patched but respectable—poor but not filthy.

Singapore's uncrowned king of the beggars was serving tea and with it his precepts for success in his calling Owner of a comfortable home, he lives the role of a prosperous Towkay (wealthy Chinese businessman) by day. Nights, however, he dons his beggar's garb to tour his domain and see how his community of 150 beggars is faring.

After 30 years he is ready to settle down and watch his children's future. He plans to let the three decide for themselves if they want to follow in their father's worn and shoddy shoes

This day, he was attired in a spotless white singlet and wide black trousers "Begging is not easy, young man," warned the Beggar Prince "A successful beggar needs tact, psychology—and a strong sense of the dramatic For without experience you would wind up in the gutter The successful beggar is never poor People think that women, the weaker sex, are easier for beggars Nonsense! They are mean, unappreciative of a good performance, and they give advice instead of money Men? They are more practical and more generous, particularly when they are out with women"

Bread-making is one of the most ancient of human arts

Wants Extension Of GI Benefits

WASHINGTON — (UP) — President Truman has asked Congress to extend, under certain conditions, unemployment compensation to workless veterans of the last war

For most GI's, benefits under the law run out July 25, 1949. After that most of them won't be able to apply for unemployment benefits under the GI Bill of Rights — the so called 52-20 club Mr Truman wants the law extended one year to July 25, 1950

'DREAM' PLAN SCRAPPED

DAYTON — (AP) — Plans for a low cost "dream" housing project here have been dropped because of increased building costs and interest rates, it has been disclosed

'Loose' Philippine Guns Hamper Effort Of Government To Enforce Law, Order

MANILA — (AP) — There are at least 500,000 firearms "loose" in the Philippines today, according to official estimates

Only 77,000 are licensed or carried by special permit

In this new republic, menaced by the communist - directed Hukbalahap uprising that refuses to be squelched this serious firearms situation has caused remarkably small outcry

Instead, the tendency has been for more and more civilians to start carrying guns. Manila is admittedly the "gun totingest" city in Asia, if not in the world.

Satero Baluyut, secretary of the interior, has expressed alarm that while police and government officers in Manila carry only 3 000 guns, there are some 12 000 in the hands of licensed private citizens and 5 000 more carried on special permits By this count law enforcement agencies are outgunned nearly six to one

Actually the odds are much greater for there are many thousands of guns in private hands neither recorded nor licensed in any way

Import records show that 30-000 small arms were imported to the Philippines in 1948 and 40 000 entered during the first six months of 1949 In addition there are all sorts of left-over guns from the war

The countryside particularly the troubled central Luzon area, is so full of guns that it is an armed camp It is there that the Philippine constabulary has fought an inconclusive three - year campaign against the outlawed Hukbalahap guerrillas of Communist Luis Taruc

The man perhaps best acquainted with the gun problem and with the fighting habits of the Huks is Lt Col Napoleon Valeriano This 33 - year - old officer commanders the constabulary's skull - and - crossbones "commando" outfit

Valeriano has 762 officers and men trained for special assault operations against Taruc's raiders He has found that the guns his men seize from Huks do not remain out of circulation very long

Through political pressure the weapons are turned over to civilian guards temporary police or voluntary guards These last are in effect the private armies of central Luzon's provincial governors and large landowners

There are approximately 12,000 private guards in the four central Luzon provinces where the Huks operate most frequently About half of these guards have been receiving a government subsidy of two pesos ($1) a day to help the constabulary fight the Huks

The current black market price for a single 30 - calibre bullet is one peso (50 cents) A civilian guard who is hard up for a little spending money will dispose of his ammunition and then draw some more from the government Guns are worth lots of money and some of them vanish, too

Your only REAL Security . . .
A Home of Your Own

A Message to the Man With a Family

Nothing else you can buy with your money lasts so long, serves so well gives so much value year in, year out as your own home It is at once the badge of solid citizenship and the mark of a man who is striving to provide security for his family

Where else can you put your money, the fruits of your labor, how else can you provide so much comfort, happiness and security for your family and yourself than in a home of your own?

The house you buy today provides shelter and a good life for your family now and as you pay for it month by month it helps you build a solid financial future for yourself Of all the things you can buy only a home retains its real worth—twenty thirty, forty years from now it will still give you safe secure shelter All that this house actually costs you is the down payment your monthly payments are both rent and savings

Yes, your only real security is a home of your own!

Stocks may depreciate bonds may be defaulted even savings accounts may be depleted but so long as your home stands it is shelter it is security it is stability, for you and your family

Fortunate indeed is the man who owns his home It gives purpose to your family life Come war or inflation your savings invested in a home always yield their full measure of value in shelter comfort and satisfaction Should hard times come some day your savings might be dissipated while your home still stands as a haven We learned during the depression of the thirties that it is neither wise profitable nor necessary to take an honest man's home from him We learned that there are measures that can be taken to help a man hold his home This lesson our country will never forget

In this blessed America of ours more people own their homes than in any land on earth They are better homes far far better than the people of any other country may aspire to And our homes are getting better all the time Now that material and labor shortages are practically over you may confidently expect to find this year the greatest home values ever seen in this country

Like everything else, houses cost more than they did ten years ago Yet such is the progress of the building industry that more people can afford to own a home today than ever before The home building industry of this country is constantly increasing the value of its product and reducing its costs so that the benefits of home ownership may be extended to more families than ever before In thousands of communities in this country, you can now buy a home for no greater monthly cost than your weekly pay check

Remember a home is more much more than bricks and mortar, nails and lumber. It is your sure investment in your family's happiness and welfare

In this insecure world a home of your own is the only sure bulwark you can erect against the forces that threaten the security of your family.

Industries Build City's Population

Mansfield—141 years old—can thank her industries for the 50,630 people living within and near the city limits today.

So says John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce. Expansion of existing industries alone since 1940 has boosted the city's population 24.1 per cent. This, Routzon adds, is almost twice the percentage of population growth for the entire state during the same period.

According to a survey of population growth made recently by Sales Management, Inc., and given to the C of C, Mansfield's population now is 46,100, as compared with 42,488 in 1946 and 37,154 in 1940. With the recent annexation of South Boulevards, Routzon believes the total population of the city of Mansfield approximates 47,000.

The total urban and suburban population of the city, including Lincoln Heights, East Mansfield, Roseland, and Coolridge Heights is figured at 50,631 by the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Going back into the history books, Mansfield's population was recorded as 13,474 in 1890. By 1930 it had grown to 33,525. An additional population of 7,155 within a radius of a mile outside the city limits brought the estimated population at that time to 40,680.

A reprint of an editorial, written in 1921, in the Mansfield Journal, which appears in Duff's History of North Central Ohio, states that "Mansfield is typical America in its location, in the background of its population, in the agricultural community surrounding it, in its history, in its railroad transportation . . . and in the nature of its industries and their economic organization.

"Richland county's population is typically American. Its main substance is the Scotch-Irish and the Pennsylvania Germans who came out on the westward wave of migration when this was the frontier, a little more than a century ago.

"We have grown a little faster than the average American town, due, probably, to our midway position in so many respects.

"Mansfield is in the midst of the markets, near the centers of national population and of the population east of the Mississippi nearer still to the center of industry, close to raw materials of every kind, with better-than-average transportation, possessing the representative American population."

India Seen Threatened By Plague

Doctor Warns Of Epidemic

CALCUTTA —(UP)— India faces the threat of a plague epidemic which might reach the proportions of that which swept the sub-continent at the turn of the century, one authority believes.

The warning was sounded by Dr. S. C. Seal, professor of epidemiology, All-India Institute of Hygiene and Public Health.

History has been found to repeat itself in the matter of bubonic plague epidemics, according to the professor, and unless all concerned — the people themselves no less than the health authorities — take utmost precautions, the present outbreak may well develop as did that of 1898.

The dread disease originally appeared in Calcutta in 1895, but only in a mild form. Three years later, however, it flared into an epidemic which apparently nothing could check. For eight long years it raged, and when it finally subsided in 1906 the toll of lives it had taken in the city alone was 62,000.

Meanwhile, the epidemic had been sweeping the country as a whole with the most disastrous effect.

Fifty-three years after making its first appearance in Calcutta, plague made its second in April, 1948. Again, it was in comparatively mild form.

This year's outbreak has not yet reached epidemic dimensions, but it has stretched out longer and is taking a heavier toll than did that of 1948.

A further complication has been the appearance of pneumonia plague, more contagious and a deadlier killer, if not correctly diagnosed in time, than the bubonic variety.

According to the latest official figures available, there were 159 hospital admissions of plague cases in the city between January and April this year. Deaths numbered 18.

Firm Builds Facilities To Handle Load

'Phone Calls Show Steady Increase

With the number of calls handled daily by the Mansfield Telephone company showing a steady increase, company officials said they have helped to meet the increased load with a $1,119,000 expansion and modernization program.

This expansion of call-handling facilities was made necessary by the tremendous increase in the number of telephones installed in the Mansfield exchange. More than 23,000 phones are in use in the Mansfield area today as compared with 10,000 in 1923.

With this increase in the load on the older equipment at the company's Park avenue office, the project included additional facilities for handling the increase in daily calls and electronic equipment for the installation of more telephones as the need arises.

All of the telephone company's buildings which have been built since the war have had "expansion" earmarked in the constrtction. The post-war units housing telephone equipment all have rear walls which can be readily knocked out, facilitating easy additions to the present structures.

This is true of the company's garage facing South Mulberry street, between Park avenue west and Second street, the new sub-station on Trimble road, and the recently built substation on Lexington avenue.

The Mulberry street building will be adjacent to the main office building to be constructed in the next 10 years, and the Lexington avenue substation may possibly be the transmitter site of the mobile-telephone equipment the telephone company intends to install in the near future. Both buildings would merely have their rear walls taken out and the additions built on as if construction had never halted at the back walls.

NUMBERS ADDED

Other expansion progress includes the thousands of new telephone numbers added to the telephone book in March, in the 7000-0 series, and the new numbers put into service the first of this month for the company's Lexington subscribers and those living in the Roseland area.

Throughout this period of expansion the Mansfield Telephone company has been able to pay substanial dividends to its stockholders each year and from time to time has been permitted to issue and sell new stock.

Name Hits Twice

DETROIT — (UP) — Gaspar Cucinella sounds like an unusual name. Police learned they had been issuing traffic tickets to one Gaspar Cucinella when they should have gone to a second man with the same name. Trouble began when the second one applied for a driver's license. The state told him he had one and sent him a duplicate of the license of the first Gaspar.

Transit System Rebuilt After Blaze

Fire Gives Impetus To Program

15-Year Franchise Spur To Concern

By GEORGE COMINOS

A "start from scratch" faced Mansfield Rapid Transit, Inc officials on that blue Monday in November, 1947 For on the day before, Nov 23, flames engulfed the firm's garage on East Fourth street, leaving only "a wall or two standing " and destroying 16 buses, including two Lake Shore buses and a truck

That fire caused damage estimated at more than $200,000, but at the same time gave impetus to the company's improvement program.

Hurried calls went out that Sunday, and buses to meet the emergency were brought in from as far away as Wheeling, W Va

Whereas the company had seven buses which had been on the streets that Sunday morning plus five other scorched buses, the emergency vehicles, arrived in time to give nearly complete service on Monday Only one school "tripper" missed

E L Hukill estimates that $350,000 was spent in the company's rehabilitation program following the fire. Hukill, vice president of the Ohio Rapid Transit company, parent firm of the Mansfield company, explained the firm then faced the fact that its frachise had but three years to go

ASSURANCE SOUGHT

Company officials felt they could not spend such a sum without assurance that the firm would have right to run buses for a long-term period They explained the situation to city council

Council granted a 15-year franchise to the company. A fare increase also was granted, raising the fare to three tokens for a quarter. Previously, the fare was four for a quarter.

The firm now has six 1948 General Motors 32 - passenger buses; three late 1948 G. M. 36-passenger buses; five 1949 Ford 27-passenger buses, and one 1944 G. M. 40-passenger bus. A few other older buses are used as special "trippers" only.

Use of the new garage was started in February. The new structure on the same site, costing approximately $100,000, is 82 by 210 feet The garage hasn't a single post inside and 28 buses can be handled easily, C M Ross, superintendent, of Mansfield Rapid Transit, stated.

Biggest change of course in the eyes of bus users is the shift from the main transfer point at Fourth and Main streets to Central park.

Ross listed the chief advantage the fact there is ample room because of the greater width of the streets There always is room to park regular and extra buses now.

"That's where the transfer point should have been all the time," Ross commented, adding he's had many favorable comments on the change.

LINES REROUTED

Another change has been some re-routing of bus lines — in line with recommendations of Ebasco Services, of New York, which conducted a survey of passengers' riding habits, frequency of service, routes, type of equipment and fares

Ross said the changes were governed by the survey. As a result, the Maple Lake area was given bus service and changes were made in the Park avenue west route, and the Hedges and Fairground areas were given night, and Sunday and holiday service

The first buses leave the garage at 5 a m, going to the end of the routes The last bus returns to the garage shortly after midnight There is extra "rush hour" service morning and evening Under a regular schedule, 12 buses are on the streets

The firm has 28 drivers, 13 mechanics and garage helpers, and two girls in the office, now located in the Richland Trust building.

Kenneth Bell, division superintendent for the Lake Shore Coach company, makes his headquarters at the same office. That firm also is an operating company of the same parent company, Ohio Rapid Transit company, with home offices in Newark.

Hukill quoted Carl W Stocks, editor of the industry's magazine, "Bus Transportation," as saying Mansfield has "the best modern transportation system of any city of its size in the country "

Hukill said the late P N Simmons, one-time chief transporation survey engineer for Ebasco, had concurred in that opinion. The magazine is going to run a story on the Mansfield bus system, Hukill said.

HOUSES BUSES—This $100,000 garage on East Fourth street was built by Mansfield Rapid Transit, Inc, to replace a building destroyed by fire in November, 1947 The garage was completed last spring as the final unit in the bus company's $300,000 expansion program.

Brazil or Brasil was the name of a legendary island in the Atlantic Ocean and historians believe its familiar existance as a geographical location led to that name for the South American country

Insulting Ad In Duel Role

MOBILE, Ala — (UP) — In the days before the Civil War, Alabama's "biting Irish" in at least one instance used the press to advertise challenges, inviting their adversaries to come armed up to and including the teeth.

This is evidenced by an advertisement appearing in a 1837 edition of the Mobile, Ala., Commercial Register. It read.

"I am well informed that John Cannon has expressed a willingness to meet me in single combat; now this is to inform him that if he is disposed to measure strength with me, I will meet him at any time 20 miles out of the city of Mobile within a 24 - foot rope ring and fight him for $500 or $1,000, and he can use his teeth if he chooses. He is a disgrace to Ireland He must either meet me or submit to the charge of cowardice, which I now throw in his teeth.

"William Gallager."
